THE TURKISH BATH

A Victim's Story of the Real Thing
In Its Native Land.

WELL MAULED AND SCRAPPED.

He Was Kneaded, Plucked, Turned Over and Walked Upon and Then Scrubbed as Though He Were a Kitchen Floor.

The tourist who wanders about Stamboul will from time to time come on domed buildings of all sizes which might be taken for mosques but that they seem to have no fountains and no minarets. From some place, such as the terrace of the mosque of Sultan Sulayman, where their roofs may be overlooked, it will be seen that the low domes are often of a peculiar salmon pink color and always covered with glass bullseyes. These are the real Turkish baths.

Quite apart from the ceremonial wash before prayer, Islam, which considers cleanliness not so much next to godliness as a part of godliness itself, ordains a periodical scrub all over. And the Turk, unlike the sodden west, never sits in hot water, but prefers a hot room, a tap and a basin as a minimum and a shampooer and a flesh glove if he can afford such luxuries.

One enters, as in the west, into the cooling room, generally a high domed room with many galleries around, a marble floor and a fountain, and before going to a private room or, if the bath is to be done on the cheap, to a place on the big common sofas one exchanges dirty boots for slipshod heelless slippers. Watch and valuables may be left under the care of the cooling room attendant, who superintends the process of undressing, winds a loin cloth around one and throws a primrose towel over one's shoulders. Before crossing the floor of the cooling room the slippers are again exchanged for wooden clogs, wherein the novice walks like Agag, delicately, in fear of a fall, till he learns to imitate the speed of the bath men by abandoning all attempts to walk and executing a fast shuffle.

The outer hot room, at about the temperature of an English shampooing room, is a very secondary affair. One stays there for a little, still clothed in the primrose towel, reclining on a distant imitation of a bed, drinking coffee and smoking a cigarette, perhaps watching a couple of shampooers amusing themselves by a wrestling bout. The customer and the shampooer wear the same type of loin cloth, an elaborate check of red and yellow that may be seen any day in the streets on an apron worn by the Albanian sellers of chestnuts or sweetmeats.

If that cigarette is finished come into the inner room, heavy with damp heat, the real bath. The attendant milks off the shoulder towel and oners

EMERALD.

A very quiet wedding took place on January 11th, at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Arwed Burleigh, when their eldest daughter, Miss Ellen J., was united in marriage to James Strain, both of Amberst Island. The ceremony was performed by Rev. James Cumberland, M. A. The bride, who was given away by her father, entered the parlor leaning on his arm, at seven o'clock. Very pretty she looked in a princess gown of amethyst panama, elaborately trimmed with braiding around the silk yoke and skirt, and also down the front panel. Miss Nancy Burleigh, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid, and wore a princess dress of blue panama trimmed with braiding. David Strain, brother of the groom, was best man. Only the intimate friends of the bride and groom were present. After the ceremony the wedding party partook of a sumptuous repast. The health of the bride and groom was drunk and pieces of wedding cake distributed. The happy pair departed next morning to visit Buffalo and Niagara Falls. When they return they are to reside on Amberst Island. The bride received a large number of beautiful and costly presents.

Keep Your Hands Soft.

an elaborate check of red and yellow that may be seen any day in the streets on an apron worn by the Albanian sellers of chestnuts or sweetmeats.

If that cigarette is finished come into the inner room, heavy with damp heat, the real bath. The attendant pulls off the shoulder towel and opens the door, a heavy wooden affair, kept shut by a counterweight, whose banging is not the least characteristic noise in the bath. Inside is a large square domed room. Innumerable bullseyes in the dome admit the light, which the whitewashed walls reflect, making a light and airy effect. On the great square slab in the middle they have placed a towel and a pillow, and here one lies, leaving the clogs on the floor.

Round the room, screened from one another by dwarf walls, are a row of marble basins, and here may be seen all classes—such is the democracy of Islam—from the army officer to the day laborer, whose shaved head oddly suggests a tonsure. The poorer classes do not indulge in the luxury of massage. They come for a wash only and often bring their own soap for economy's sake. It is not uncommon to see two of them scrubbing one another by turns.

Presently, unbidden, the shampooer mounts the slab and squats beside his victim. Most of his work consists in kneading the flesh rather than the long, heavy strokes of an English masseur. But when the customer is turned on his face the masseur becomes more energetic. He plucks the skin on each side of the spine, walks up and down on the back and strenuously gathers up arms and legs into curious bone breaking knots regardless of the grunts of the stiff jointed west. A final super-Gordian knot and the clapping of his hands show that it is over.

The customer, as soon as he can collect limbs which seem to have been pulled clean off him, adjourns to one of the basins and is rubbed with a rough glove to take off the old skin. Then the man brings a battered metal bowl ("old bowl, old bath," is the Turkish proverb for "the old, old story") with soap and a lather wisp of "lyf" (Mecca palm fiber, and scrubs conscientiously for some ten minutes, working with the abandon of a zealous housemaid on a floor, forgetful apparently that the object he is scrubbing is flesh and bone.

Finally he pours warm water from the bowl to wash away the last of the soapsuds and, if the bath is a large and up to date one, conducts his well scrubbed victim to a cold douche.

Drying takes place in the outer hot room, sundry loin cloths and towels are wrapped about the body, a small towel makes a turban for the head, and clean clogs are produced for the feet, which have been dried with great—sometimes inconveniently great—care. A loud clapping of hands announces that the process is over, and the three or four Turks who seem always to be doing nothing zealously in the room crowd round to wish one good health. —London Globe.

OUR LAYMEN WHO WORK

DUDLEY L. HILL.

Mr. Dudley Hill was born in India in 1845, his father having been an officer in the Indian Army. He was educated in London, England, at Christ's Hospital (the famous Bluecoat School), and after spending six years on the Continent, in Paris and Berlin, came out to this country in the autumn of 1886, and early in 1887 entered the service of the Dominion Bank, with which he has been ever since.

Mr. Hill's chief work in Church matters is in connection with Sunday schools. He began as a teacher in St. George's Sunday school, Oshawa, in 1890. Afterwards he was for several years secretary, then superintendent of St. James' Sunday school, Orillia, and for the past six years has been superintendent of St. Mary Magdalene's Sunday school, Nanapanee, Ont. He is an enthusiast in Sunday school affairs and in much demand as a speaker at conventions, etc. While in Orillia, Mr. Hill was, for a few years, delegate to the Synod of Toronto, and for the past seven years has been delegate to the Synod of Ontario. He is chairman of the Diocesan Sunday School Committee, besides being a member of several other important committees. He is a delegate from Ontario diocese to the Sunday School Commission and also to the Board of Management of the M.S.C.C. Mr. Hill holds the Bishop's license as a lay reader, and his clergyman never calls on him in vain when there is work to do.

Mr. Hill's activities are not confined to Church matters, as he is a member of the Board of Education and Public Library Board of Nanapanee, and as a recreation he is an amateur actor of no mean order.

Mr. Hill is training his family to follow in his footsteps, his eldest daughter being a teacher in the Sunday school and a member of the altar chapter of St. Mary Magdalene's, Nanapanee.—Ontario Churchman.

MERCHANTS' BANK OF CANADA. ESTABLISHED 1864.

on the head.
At the request of the British police, the Dominion police are sending out instructions to the police in every city town and county in Canada asking them to keep a close surveillance of any suspicious characters particularly those of anarchistic tendency.
William Babcock a resident of Prince Edward county, was driving in township of Sidney, when, in turning a corner, he was thrown from his cutter. His head struck an iron spike in the ground, which was used to hold the guy wire of a pole and his skull was fractured. His condition is precarious.
It cost $3,733.25 to maintain the high school in Smith's Falls in 1901; it cost $7,002.72 last year. In 1901 cost of maintenance for public schools was $7,154.31; last year it was $14,931.11; in 1901, the number of teachers was sixteen, last year the number was twenty-four. The average attendance at the public school of the same town has grown from 674 to 808.
Toronto is soon to float a loan for one million dollars to meet the expenses of installing the Hydro-electric system in the city. The money will probably be raised in London. Up to date $700,000 has been spent on the system within the city limits. It has been obtained by means of local loans, and the additional million will be used to carry the work forward.
The jury at the inquest touching the deaths of Engineer Dennis and Fireman McDermott in the G.T.R. wreck at Collins Bay decided that had a night operator been at Collins Bay station the accident could have been averted. It is thought Engineer Dennis saw the danger signal of the brakeman of the stalled train, for the emergency brakes were set before the collision.
The establishment of a direct steamship service between Canada and Mexico has resulted in a big increase in trade between the two countries. Mr. D. A. Ansell, the Mexican Consul-General, has just completed a statement of imports and exports for 1910, exclusive of goods shipped overland, or via New York. According to this statement, the exports from Canada show an increase of $1,027,400, and the imports $710,500.
Charles Grant, brakeman on the train in charge of Conductor Smith and Engineer Storits, which was run into at Collins Bay, Monday morning, had a narrow escape. He was riding on the engine of the first train and when he felt the air-brakes go on he jumped down and started back to investigate. He found that the train had parted between the first and second cars. He stepped in between the cars to examine the coupling and then stepped out to signal to the engineer to go ahead. This saved his life for the crash came a few seconds later. If he had been caught between the cars he would have been ground to death as these cars were thrown off the track and turned on their sides.

A by-law was passed appointing Messrs A. E. Paul, and John T. Grange, auditors for 1911, at a salary of $25 each.

Mr. J. Storms was heard at the bar of the council and stated that his lease for the rental of market privileges would expire on February 5th, and he asked to be relieved of the duties, as he could not collect enough toll to pay the monthly installment, let alone getting anything for himself.

Referred to the Market and Police Committee to report on the by-law governing the sale of these rights at the next regular session of council.

Moved by Coun. Steacy, seconded by Coun. Dickinson, that Mayor Kimmerly, Reeve Alexander, and Coun. Waller, be a committee to deal with the matter of dredging the river. The following accounts were ordered paid.

Kingston, Jan. 24.—Ald. R. F. Elliott, Chairman of the civic Light, Heat and Power Committee, had a conversation on Tuesday with the Hon. Adam Beck, Chairman of the Hydro-electric Commission, in regard to power for Kingston and places east and west of here. Hon. Mr. Beck held out good hopes of making arrangements for the use of Waddington, N. Y., power, and he has his experts preparing plans and estimates of cost for submission to Kingston and elsewhere. He believes he can put power into Kingston in as short a time as any other concern, and he hopes to show the civic committee his capacity for rapid work. Ald. Elliott will wait a week to allow Hon. Mr. Beck to send down his figures, and when these are received the eastern municipalities will be called together to consider them.

It cost $3,733.25 to maintain the high school in Smith's Falls in 1901; it cost $7,002.72 last year. In 1901 cost of maintenance for public schools was $7,154.31; last year it was $14,931.11; in 1901, the number of teachers was sixteen, last year the number was twenty-four. The average attendance at the public school of the same town has grown from 674 to 808.

Toronto is soon to float a loan for one million dollars to meet the expenses of installing the Hydro-electric system in the city. The money will probably be raised in London. Up to date $700,000 has been spent on the system within the city limits. It has been obtained by means of local loans, and the additional million will be used to carry the work forward.

The jury at the inquest touching the deaths of Engineer Dennis and Fireman McDermott in the G.T.R. wreck at Collins Bay decided that had a night operator been at Collins Bay station the accident could have been averted. It is thought Engineer Dennis saw the danger signal of the brakeman of the stalled train, for the emergency brakes were set before the collision.

The establishment of a direct steamship service between Canada and Mexico has resulted in a big increase in trade between the two countries. Mr. D. A. Ansell, the Mexican Consul-General, has just completed a statement of imports and exports for 1910, exclusive of goods shipped overland, or via New York. According to this statement, the exports from Canada show an increase of $1,027,400, and the imports $710,500.

Charles Grant, brakeman on the train in charge of Conductor Smith and Engineer Storits, which was run into at Collins Bay, Monday morning, had a narrow escape. He was riding on the engine of the first train and when he felt the air-brakes go on he jumped down and started back to investigate. He found that the train had parted between the first and second cars. He stepped in between the cars to examine the coupling and then stepped out to signal to the engineer to go ahead. This saved his life for the crash came a few seconds later. If he had been caught between the cars he would have been ground to death as these cars were thrown off the track and turned on their sides.

FORTUNE FAVORS THE BRAVE; OR, A LOOK INTO THE PAST

CHAPTER III.—(Cont'd)

Nurse Wortley was delighted to see the girl and welcomed her warmly.

Nancy debated in her own mind whether she should speak of the wonderful offer that had been made to her, and decided not to do so.

"Perhaps by to-morrow Dorothy will have forgotten all about it," she thought; "least said soonest mended."

There was a long letter from the doctor to give them food for conversation, and they chatted on so long that it chimed half-past five before Nancy imagined it was nearly so late.

"Take care of yourself, dearie," Nurse Wortley said. "Ah! Miss Hamilton, my dear, you have won golden laurels for yourself over this case. Ripstone does nothing but talk about you; and as for Sir Humphrey—well he was riding past here yesterday and he told me you were an angel."

Nancy laughed, then kissed Nurse Wortley, and took her departure. It was just growing dusk when she started on her long walk, but she did not mind that, she was afraid of nothing or of no one living except Thomas Moss, and he was not likely to trouble her now.

She hurried on through the village till she reached a small gate that admitted her into the Hall grounds, and pushing this open, passed through. As she did so she heard two men's voices speaking, and stopped involuntarily to listen; the next instant she was trembling all over and blushing crimson with shame and mortification.

Just to her right hand were two men sauntering along slowly, and smoking.

"The whole thing is preposterous!" one was saying, in a clear, sharp voice. "Leicester must be out of his senses to entertain it for a second."

"Or at least until he has discovered something more about this nursing girl," answered the other. "But Dolly seems to have set her mind on it."

"The mind of a child! Why, she would tire of this Hamilton woman in a week, Merefield. But that, after all, is aside from the question. The thing is that Leicester must be made to see how wrong it would be to have a person of this stamp brought into his house as a daily, hourly companion for his daughter. Good gracious! for aught we know, she may be one of a gang of thieves, or something worse!"

"I shall be very firm to-night, and—"

And the two young men paced slowly away into the dusk and shadows, and Nancy heard no more. She was very pale as she roused herself and continued her walk to the Hall.

"Was I not right? How well I

"By Jove!" the young man said to himself, "it's very odd, but I could declare I have met her somewhere before; yet she doesn't know me."

Sir Humphrey bustled in at this moment.

"Hello, Derry, my boy! Ah! Nancy, child; so you two have made friends already I see; come, that is good—very good."

Darnley started as if he had been shot. This girl was Nurse Hamilton, the nursing girl, the adventuress—it was impossible. She looked a mere child.

"I have not had the honor of an introduction to Miss Hamilton, Leicester," he said, hurriedly, "and so, perhaps, you—"

"It is scarcely needed," broke in Nancy, clearly, fixing her magnificent blue eyes on him proudly, "since it is not likely that Mr. Darnley and I shall ever renew our acquaintance; there is nothing in common between us; for aught he knows about me, I may be one of a gang of thieves or, perhaps, worse."

Darnley started as if he had been shot; he recognized his own words, and his brows contracted, but before he could say anything Nancy had gone quietly on, and in gentle and grateful terms had begged leave to refuse the offer made to her by Sir Humphrey and his daughter. Sir Humphrey was more than disappointed, and urged the girl in every way he could to reconsider this decision.

"My darling will break her heart," he said, in a troubled way; then, turning to the young man, "Derry, won't you try and persuade Miss Hamilton to do as we wish?"

Mr. Darnley was silent while his uncle did all in his power to induce the girl to throw aside her objections and gratify Dorothy and himself.

"I cannot, Sir Humphrey," Nancy said, over and over again, "I cannot. Please let me thank you for the kindness, the generosity which prompts your offer, but the suggestion you have both made to me is an impossible one. I am not your daughter's equal; I am a woman who must work for her living, and I do not fear to work—indeed, I would rather have to do it than lead a life of luxurious dependence."

"Well, well, my dear, you know best, of course, but we will not decide this to-night; sleep on it, things always look different after a good night's sleep. What is it, Chadbrand?"

And Sir Humphrey went out of the room to speak to the butler. Left alone with this strange girl, Mr. Darnley stood staring at her until she grew uncomfortable, and as she moved to leave the room he stopped her.

"Tell me," he said, quietly, "if

For answer his fingers closed over hers, and the compact was sealed in that mutual handclasp.

LONDON'S POLICE FIGURES.

Statistics of the Highways and Byways of the Metropolis.

Crime as a profession is declining in London; Londoners are becoming more fond of walking and more careless; the "growler" is still making a determined struggle for life; between 2 and 6 a.m. is the burglar's busy time; he likes insecure windows best as a means of entry; and Jane Heath a retired charwoman receives a pension of $62 a year.

These are only a few of the things which the average Londoner does not know and which he can learn from a perusal of a primly-bound panorama of London, issued under the title of "Report of the Commissioner of Peace of the Metropolis for the year 1905."

There is one constable now serving in the force who joined in 1867. Those were the "good old days" when the burglar's life was worth living. In those days (to take the record of the year 1870) there were 19,095 felonies relating to property when the population was 3,618,992—and only a few more than half of the felons were caught. Now the police catch 13,322 people for 17,982 felonies; and although the population has doubled, the total amount secured by "professionals" only advanced from $396,110 to $666,105, while the amount recovered advanced from $98,620 to $124,920.

The returns of public vehicles allow some interesting inferences. Hansom cabs, for instance, have fallen in number from 6,696 in 1905 to 3,299 last year, and fleets of taxicabs have been launched to take their place. There were only nineteen taxicabs in 1905, but there were 3,996 last year.

There is, of course, a notable increase in motor omnibuses, and tramcars, and a corresponding decrease in their horse-drawn predecessors; but the most remarkable thing about the public carriage statistics is this: there are fewer vehicles in use now than there were in 1805. In that year there were 16,585 vehicles on the road. Last year there were 15,906. Many of them are larger, of course, but then the population has also grown considerably in the same time. So, obviously, London walks a good deal now.

London still goes on its absent-minded way shedding its possessions in cabs and omnibuses. Sixty-five thousand three hundred and seventy-five articles were reported found by the conductors of public conveyances last year.

Twenty-eight thousand and sixty-two of these articles were restored to their owners. The rest, after three months, went to the drivers or conductors who found them. One man was rewarded with the sum of $450 for his find, another received $280.

WHO ARE SHOUTING THE PRAISES OF DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS IN THE WEST.

A Neighbor advised him to take them for his Rheumatism and Gravel. They cured him.

West Gravelbourg, Sask., Jan. 2 (Special).—Alexander McCarter, the postmaster here, has joined the great western army that has for its watchword, "When ailing, use Dodd's Kidney Pills." And like all others he has good and sufficient reasons.

"I was laid up with Rheumatism and Gravel," Mr. McCarter states, "and was also troubled with my bladder. I was so bad I could not do much work. A neighbor came along who had been troubled the same way, and advised me to try Dodd's Kidney Pills. I did it. I bought two boxes, and, using them according to directions, was soon able to go to work."

Notice one thing: It was a neighbor who had been troubled the same way who advised the postmaster to use Dodd's Kidney Pills. He also had been cured by them. That's why he recommended them.

If you're troubled with Kidney Disease in any form—Backache, Rheumatism, Lumbago, Gravel, Dropsy, Diabetes, or Bright's Disease—ask your neighbors. You'll soon find one who has been cured by Dodd's Kidney Pills.

CANCER STILL A MYSTERY

MORE FREQUENT IN WOMEN THAN IN MEN.

Influence of Alcohol in the Incidence of Cancer Very Important.

An important lecture on "Cancer" was delivered recently by Sir Alfred Pearce Gould, senior surgeon to the Middlesex Hospital, before the Royal College of Surgeons in London, England.

Cancer, said the lecturer, occurred in all races of men, though we were unable to attribute the disease directly to the influence of race, of climate, of diet, of occupation, or to any of the associated and complex conditions that might be summarized as environment. It had recently been discovered that the disease was not limited to man, but that it occurred in all vertebrate animals. It had been proved to occur in birds, reptiles, and fishes.

PECULIARITIES OF CANCER.

Thousands of experiments upon mice, rats, and dogs had proved that cancer could be transferred from "host to host," but towering above these facts was the greater and all-important one that cancer could not be transferred to an animal of another species. Cancer of a mouse was readily transferred to other mice, but it could not be grafted upon a rat or upon any other animal of another species. Cancer was cell life that was disorderly, irregular, with a minimum of development differentiation

And the two young men paced slowly away into the dusk and shadows, and Nancy heard no more. She was very pale as she roused herself and continued her walk to the Hall.

"Was I not right? How well I know the world!" she said, bitterly. "I am condemned already. Well, perhaps it is for the best. It would have broken my heart to have listened to such words after I had agreed to stay! Now my decision is taken. I shall refuse Dorothy's offer; and Mr. Darnley's annoyance and anxiety about me shall be at rest."

She found her patient very tired, and rather cross, and Nancy understood at once that something had been said to vex her. But Miss Leicester made no remark, only sighed with relief as she laid her golden head on the pillow and dropped into sleep, while Nancy sat in the twilight by the fire, and tried to read her future in the blazing coals.

She heard the young men return to the house and go up to their rooms to dress for dinner; and seeing that the invalid was not likely to want her for some time, she stole softly away, and went downstairs to find Sir Humphrey.

She knew where to look for him, in his cosy "den," where the trophy of many a splendid run hung on the walls, and the dogs slumbered and reigned monarchs of all the chairs and cushions they could find.

Knocking, she entered quietly, and found the genial owner was not there, but her mind was made up, and she determined to wait and speak to him without delay.

She moved up to the fire, and kneeling down, patted and caressed the dogs, who all knew her well, and a tear rose to her eyes as she realized how great was the gift held out to her, and the difference in the lot she refused from the one she would call her own. Then, hearing footsteps, she rose to her feet, and turned as the door opened and some one came in.

This some one, however, was not Sir Humphrey Leicester, with his bluff, cheery manner, his mane of white hair, and white beard, and his handsome, pleasant face, but a young man, tall, dark, with a pair of deep-gray eyes that attracted immediate attention.

"I beg your pardon," he said, drawing back. Nancy colored vividly, bowed very faintly, and prepared to go.

"Pray do not let me intrude," Derrick Darnley hastened to say. "I have only sauntered in here from sheer idleness, while you, no doubt, have another and better reason for your presence."

"I wonder who she is," he thought to himself. "Leicester did not tell me he had any guests here."

"I wish to speak to Sir Humphrey on business, certainly," Nancy replied, coldly, after a moment's pause, "and, therefore, with your permission, I will remain."

So saying, she turned to the fire again, leaving Darnley staring at her graceful back and the loose coil of red-brown hair that finished off her dainty little head. "She had not had time to change into her nurse's dress, so there was no outward sign to indicate who she was."

Shiloh's Cure

And Sir Humphrey went out of the room to speak to the butler. Left alone with this strange girl, Mr. Darnley stood staring at her until she grew uncomfortable, and as she moved to leave the room he stopped her.

"Tell me," he said, quietly, "if you had not overheard my words to Merefield, would you have been inclined to accept my uncle's offer?"

"I do not recognize your right to question me," the girl answered haughtily.

"Because I feel that I was both unjust and unwise," the young man went on. "There is an old proverb that says, 'never judge by appearances,' in which I have firmly believed up to now; but since I have had the pleasure of seeing you I—"

Nancy Hamilton put up her hand.

"Please spare me the insult of flattery," she replied, shortly.

"On my honor, I mean no insult," he replied, hotly. "And as a proof of that, I beg to add my voice to that of my uncle's and my cousin's, and ask you to reconsider your decision and stay here."

"Thanks, you are very kind." He flinched at her sarcasm.

"Will you not believe me?" he asked, slowly.

"I really cannot see what it matters whether I believe you or not."

As she spoke she lifted her eyes to his face, and the blaze of the fire fell on them.

In an instant he had recognized her.

"Stop one moment," he said, hurriedly. "I own I am a conceited fellow to imagine that you would care one way or the other, but will you answer me just one question, Miss Hamilton?"

"If I can," Nancy replied, interested almost against herself.

"I think I can pride myself on my knowledge of character, and so I venture to say that your nature is one that would never forget a service rendered, however small. Am I right?"

Nancy nodded her head.

"Yes, with all my faults, I don't think I number ingratitude among them," she said, smiling faintly.

"And that if it were in your power to return that service, however difficult, you would do it? Once more, am I right?"

"Yes," was the reply.

"Then," Darnley said, quickly, "I want you to do me a kindness in return for a slight service I was fortunate enough to render you one night, some time ago, when a cowardly rascal was endeavoring to—"

Nancy gave a little cry.

"It was you—you who helped me, then? Ah! how can I ever thank you!"

Her voice, full of gratitude, rang in his ears like heavenly music. He suddenly experienced a curious yet delightful sensation.

"You can best thank me by showing that you forgive me for the unjust suspicions I entertained against Miss Hamilton in consenting to become Sir Humphrey's daughter and giving my pretty little Cousin Dorothy the dearest wish of her heart."

He stretched out his hand as he spoke, and Nancy put hers into it shyly.

"How do you know that you will not tire of your new acquaintance in a week?" she said, rather tremulously.

could not be transferred to an animal of another species. Cancer of a mouse was readily transferred to other mice, but it could not be grafted upon a rat or upon any other animal of another species. Cancer was cell life that was disorderly, irregular, with a minimum of development, differentiation, and function. It was not a disease attacking the body from without; it was the result of a breach or failure of the fundamental cell law.

Certain conditions known to exert an influence on the causation of cancer were mentioned. These included (1) age, by which it was fully established that cancer was greatly influenced; and (2) sex. It was well known, said the lecturer, that cancer was more frequent in women than in men, and that its incidence increased earlier and attained its maximum sooner in them than in men, but that after the age of 70 the incidence was practically the same in the two sexes.

THE INFLUENCE OF ALCOHOL on the incidence of cancer was very important. Statistics showed that the disease was twice as frequent among brewers and license-holders as among clergymen, and that the cancer incidence in any trade varied with the attendant habits as regarded alcohol.

With regard to these varied conditions, Sir Alfred expressed the opinion that clinical experience and experimental pathology threw some ray of hope across the dark sea of malignant disease. The deep impress of the primal laws of development held the cells of tissues in true and loyal obedience to the very end in the almost infinite majority of cases, and in the large majority of individuals. This was the great initial fact of cancer immunity—that in spite of added years, and of all unfavorable conditions which tended to wear down the obedience of cell life to its fundamental laws, 90 per cent. of men and women who passed down the hill of life held this dread enemy at bay.

"And did he?" John asked.

"Oh, yes, and the lamb with his clipped fleece seemed to look quite proud that he had given my pretty dress to me from his own back, and yet he was nicely clothed, too, although he had given me half his fleece."

"That was funny," said John.

"And all true," said grandma, "and I think now you will rather have a lamb than a goat." And John thought he would.—Youth's Companion.

"Jimmy," said the fond mother to her smart nine-year-old, "what became of that fruit-cake I made for you as a treat yesterday? Did you eat it?"

"No, mamma," answered Jimmy, with a grin; "I gave it to the teacher instead."

"That was very nice and generous of you, Jimmy!" complimented his mother. "And did your teacher eat it?"

"Yes; I think so," answered Jimmy. "She wasn't at school today."

BETWEEN TWO FIRES.

Sufferings of Royal Personages From Strange Court Etiquette.

Two instances of the extremes to which royal etiquette is sometimes carried are given by H. Thielson Dyer in his "Royalty in All Ages."

"The fads of sovereigns with their royal etiquette were frequently carried to such lengths," he says, "as to make martyrs of them."

"According to an absurd story, when seated by the fireside Philip III. of Spain was once nearly suffocated with heat from the large quantity of wood that the firemaker had kindled; but his grandeur would not suffer him to rise from the chair and the domestics could not presume to enter the apartment because it was against the etiquette."

"At length the Marquis de Potat appeared and the King ordered him to damp the fire; but he excused himself, alleging that he was forbidden by etiquette to perform such a function, for which the Duc d'Ussada ought to be called upon, as it had his business."

"The Duke was out, the fire burnt fiercer, and the King actually endured it rather than derogate from his dignity. But it is said his blood was heated to such a degree that an erysipelas of the head appeared the next day which, succeeded by a violent fever, carried him off in the twenty-fourth year of his reign."

"And what can be more ludicrous than the following: The palace was on fire; a soldier who knew the King's sister was in her apartment and must inevitably have been consumed in a few minutes by the flames rushed in at the risk of his life and brought her out. But Spanish etiquette was wofully broken and the loyal soldier was brought to trial and condemned to death. The Spanish Princess, however, in consideration of the circumstance, condescended to pardon the soldier and his life was saved."

It is a Liver Pill.—Many of the ailments that men has to contend with have their origin in a disordered liver, which is a delicate organ, peculiarly susceptible to the disturbances that come from irregular habits or lack of care in eating and drinking. This accounts for the great many liver regulators now pressed on the attention of sufferers. Of these there is none superior to Parmelee's Vegetable Pills. Their operation though gentle is effective, and the most delicate can

The greater the irritation in the throat the more distressing the cough becomes. Coughing is the effort of Nature to expel this irritating substance from the air passages. #### MARY'S LAMB.

"Oh, how I wish we had a goat," said John, one morning at breakfast. "Then I could harness it into a cart and play I had a horse." "Why wouldn't a lamb be better?" suggested his grandma. "Then you could take the wool he gives you to make your clothes." "Would one lamb make me a suit?" I thought it took a whole flock!" "So it does, dear, in the way clothes are made now, but when I was a little girl we counted our winter clothes on the sheep's back just before sheep-shearing time, and sometimes we helped card and spin the thread. And once I had a lamb given me for my very own."

"It was way up country that I lived, and grandfather found it out in the field, where its mother, who had another lamb to take care of, had left it all alone. 'Why can't Mary have this one, mother?' She would make a great pet of it," he said. So they gave it to me. "And your name was Mary, so 'Mary had a little lamb' really and truly!" cried the children.

"Why, I don't know whether that verse was written then or not. I don't really think it was. The poor little thing was very weak, and its legs were long and stiff and clumsy, so that when I tried to carry it it was very hard. It kept calling 'B-ma-a! B-ma-a!' all the time. So I fed it with warm milk, as I was told, and tied a blue ribbon round its neck, and we had the very best times together. I used to feed it, and it soon followed me all round."

"Did it every follow you to school one day?" asked John. "No, they would not let it; but it went to the garden gate and waited for me, and all the time it grew bigger and bigger and bigger, and it tried to eat up its ribbon and the flower-beds, and so it had to go back in the flock. When

He returned the following answer:

"In the first place, a point is defined by Euclid as that which has no parts and no magnitude, and how can a pin stand on that which hath no parts and no magnitude? In the second place, a pin will not stand on its head, much less, therefore, will it stand on its point. Thirdly, and lastly, it will if you stick it in hard enough."

The first decade of the twentieth century is over. It has been a decade of progress in science, mechanics, industry, art, politics and morals. One of its silent features has been the successful campaign against dreaded diseases and "plagues." New measures have been adopted in the interest of public and private health. Medicine and surgery have almost been "revolutionized," and an active propaganda in the press and in the school has "peopleized" sound ideas of prevention and protection to a remarkable extent. In an article in the current World's Work Dr. Woods Hutchinson briefly describes the decade's progress toward health and increased life. The death rate has been reduced 10 per cent., the same rate of gain has been achieved in the case of tuberculosis, infant mortality is declining, and 20,000 babies are saved annually—and so on.

The war on bugs, bacilli and other carriers of disease has been energetic and effective. The notorious hook-worm has been discovered and the simple means of getting rid of the parasite demonstrated to the rural South. We have efficacious remedies against spotted fever, and pellagra is yielding to research. Typhoid is going the way of yellow fever now that, in addition to care and intelligence in handling water and milk, the house fly is being ruthlessly exterminated.

Faith in the magic power of drugs has waned. Even leading physicians speak of the "extraordinary delusion" that pills and mixtures can undo the mischief of foul air, bad habits, intemperance. The gospel of sane, moderate living; of exercise and recreation, of plenty of fresh air, has been embraced by thousands. Institutes have been established to grapple with cancer and other baffling maladies, and further advance is a certainty. The next decade is sure to better the excellent instructions of the one now closing.

Unworthy of respect he may be, unworthy of consideration, unworthy of sympathy, but the most pitiable spectacle in the streets he surely is—the broken man; pitiable in his seeming hopelessness, his subject misfortune, his tenacity in joyless life, his manifest physical suffering, his apparent mental degradation. Evidently aimless and without purpose, yet he shuffles along through the crowd—pinched with cold but making no appeal for sympathy and none for help, as far removed from human aid on a busy street as if he were clinging to an ice cake in the arctic seas.

DONT PLAY A BABY'S PART

Religion Calls for the Heart That Is Not Easily Daunted

"I have written unto you young men because you are strong."—I. John ii. 13.

Only the weaklings are likely to be attracted by a faith that offers refuge and rest.

We have emphasized too long the dependent and passive aspects of the religious life. We have said that men must feel weak and helpless, weary and undone, or they could not find this new way of life. As a result we have practically barred those who were conscious of strength and those to whom life meant more than rest.

Weariness is common to all who labor and only a fool imagines that he is sufficient for every exigency. But neither the aching limbs nor the puzzled brain justify any true man in lying supine before the burden or the struggle. He does not welcome a faith that bids him give up and allow a greater power to do all things for him.

If religion means simply falling on the arms of the infinite it cannot mean rising in strength or growing in moral powers. If it means only dependence it cannot mean development. You can never be a man so long as you are satisfied to play a baby's part.

If faith means fleeing from the world, from its cares and conflicts, it does but make

COWARDS OF US ALL.

If it means hiding from foes and from duties it robs of our own hearts. Too many saints live like scared rabbits, palpitating behind theological bushes, while the world goes surging by. Instead of such faith ever saving the world, it is but sapping strength from it.

If we go on preaching rest from labor, refuge from the battle of life, and release from punishment for wrong as the cardinal gifts of religion, we are working a process of selecting the cowards and weaklings and leaving the brave and strong. We divide men and array the best life of the world under the banners of irreligion.

But to think of the religious life as one of weak and cowardly resting when work is to be done is to misrepresent it wholly. That is simply to accept the wish of the lazy hypocrite as our standard. He who believes in a divine order in the universe grows in the faith that life's work is worth doing and its battles worth fighting. Living means not the chance to sigh and slumber, but to serve with all that works for eternal good.

The rest that religion offers is that which comes from learning to work in harmony with the laws of the universe. It substitutes the economy of working with God for the wasted effort of fighting against the infinite.

THE PEACE OF RELIGION

is not that slothful calm, but that of harmony with truth and right, with eternal purposes of good.

Religion offers man a chance of worthy work. It calls for the best in us, for it is an invitation to take up the greatest task in the world, to toil side by side with the most high in the labor of bringing man to glory and perfection.

Men who love the fray will heed its call, for it rallies the souls of men against the greatest foes we know, the foes of greed and lust, the foes that lie entrenched in our own interests and our own hearts. It calls for high courage. Its saints fear not hard blows. If you love a good fight just try living wholly for the truth for awhile.

It is time to forsake and forget the pious crutches and sentimental couches, time for men of faith to see that their God is waging a great fight and needs them.

The great leaders have pressed before, counting not their lives dear if men might but find life, might be lifted from bonds and given their rights. The true saints follow; the man of strength rejoices to serve with them.

OLD BABYLONIAN RECORDS OF CLAY DECIPHERED.

They Relate to the Everyday Affairs of the Citizens of Dilbat.

A correspondent of the London Standard gives some interesting details of a store of cuneiform written tablets recently discovered at the ancient town of Dilbat, near Babylon. The tablets tell in graphic manner the story of the citizens, their business transactions, disputes and everyday life.

They are not the usual royal edicts and records, but what may best be termed family archives. They relate to a very early period, the onus of any subsequent dispute of the deed upon the seller. For all the contests concerning the property (A. B.) is responsible. Finally follow the names of the witnesses, and often also of the scribe of the tablet, and generally several signets of the persons concerned.

"Legally the vender should always seal the tablet, but if he had not a signet, then some or all of the witnesses applied theirs. Properly speaking, also, the tablets should have been in duplicate. The first was inscribed and baked and copied; then a cover of soft clay placed over or around it, and the document re-engrossed upon this cover from the copy, so that it could be referred to at any time by paying the required fee at

INTERNATIONAL LESSON,

JAN. 20.

Lesson V.—Jehoshaphat's Good Reign in Judah, 2 Chron. 17.

1-13. Golden Text, Matt. 6. 33.

Verses 1-6.—The pity and prosperity of the king. These verses, and those which follow, are additional material to the record of Jehoshaphat found in Kings.

1. In his stead—That is, in place of Asa.

Strengthened himself against Israel—Although he later made a firm alliance with Ahab, the relations between the two kingdoms had been troubled, and it must have taken some time to establish peace.

2. Which Asa his father had taken—See Word Studies for January 15, with comment on verse 8.

3. The first ways of his father—As David is wanting in the Septuagint, this seems to refer rather to Asa, whose early reign was characterized by devotion to Jehovah, in contrast with the faithlessness and cruelty of his last years.

The Baalim—A term for the various false deities, especially those of Canaan, each one of which was given the title of Baal, or lord.

4. The doings of Israel—A reference either to the calf-worship, or to the introduction of Baal-worship by Jezebel.

5. Tribute—To be distinguished from that paid over by the Arabians and Philistines (verse 11). In this case the money was probably a free offering and not an exaction.

6. High places—The word originally meant "heights," any outstanding elevation; then a place of worship, of Jehovah as well as other gods; later, after the Deuteronomic reform, not only an unlawful place of worship, but one entirely given up to the worship of other gods. In this sense it is frequently used in Chronicles.

Asherim—Wooden poles set up like stone pillars at sanctuaries, perhaps to represent the dwelling place of deity. By the Deuteronomic law they were forbidden (Deut. 16. 22), and commanded to be destroyed (Deut. 12. 3). These symbols had grown up probably during the later and more careless years of Asa's reign.

7-9.—The king's provision for the promulgation of the law.

7. Princes—These are, historically, just so many names. It is mentioned that their work was done in the third year of Jehoshaphat's reign, to emphasize the fact that he began his reign with this purpose to instruct the people.

8. With them the Levites—The author himself was partial to the Levitical order, and magnifies them throughout his Chronicles. Hence it is natural for him to single out this fact of their performing the priestly duty of teaching the law.

Jehoram—He is to be distinguished from the king of Judah by the same name. Of this man all that is known is that he was a member of the royal commission. The priests were the guardians of the law, and hence its natural teachers.

9. The book of the law of Jehovah—This is the sole account of the with cold but making no appeal for sympathy and none for help, as far removed from human aid on a busy street as if he were clinging to an ice cake in the arctic seas.

Possibly it is not the suffering which is the pity. Suffering is a common thing and much of it is nobly endured. More likely it is the waste—the hopeless, wretched waste—of a man. A machine rusted in the field will cause mental unrest. Here is a machine rusted and wasted in the streets—a human starved, frozen and hopeless. He acknowledges that he has no claim on the world. The dusty brown of a shabby hat pulled down on his head in dejection; the blue and red face which shows beneath it is suffering; the fringe at the edges of his worn clothing is poverty; the holes in the frail shoes destitution. He is found in any shelter he can find—and, occasionally, dead on a railroad track or in the snow.

No one to waste sympathy on, assuredly. Certainly no one to waste money on—unworthy, without a doubt, but great in his ability to sustain misfortune and wonderful in his capacity to carry suffering. Untrustworthy and richly meriting his calamities we may concede, but pitiable as he puts himself in contrast with reliant, successful, competent, active men who march by him on the street. He is failure, and that, no matter what the cause, whether by misfortune or lack of character, is sordid tragedy.

THE YOUNG MAN'S TACT.

The young man who was having his picture taken in the photograph gallery was an innocent listener to this conversation between two young ladies on the other side of the screen:

"You know, Kate, I sometimes wear a long curl hanging down the back of my neck!"

"Yes."

"Well, when Phil was calling on me the other evening, he asked me if he might have that curl, and I jokingly said yes. Before I knew what he was about, he had taken a little pair of scissors out of his pocket and clipped it off, close to my head."

"Why, the idea! Didn't that make you furious?"

"Not for the smallest fraction of a second. I thought it was splendid of him that he didn't seize it and pull it off."

THE SILVER LINING.

"Oh, John!" exclaimed Mrs. Shortcash, who was reading a letter, "our son has been expelled from college. Isn't it awful?"

"Oh, I don't know," answered Shortcash. "Perhaps I can pull through without making an assignment now."

A DIFFERENCE.

Smith—"What is your boy learning at college?"

Brown—"I don't know. I can only tell you what he is studying."

phic manner the story of the citizens, their business transactions, disputes and everyday life.

They are not the usual royal edicts and records, but what may best be termed family archives. They relate to a very early period, being mostly dated in the reigns of the predecessors of that mighty monarch Hammurabi, who codified the Babylonian laws, and so were composed at the period of the first Babylonian dynasty.

From these newly found tablets and previously deciphered references in the records of Babylon we now know that Dilbat was a small Babylonian town on that great masterpiece of Mesopotamian engineering the Arahtu canal.

"The canal," says the correspondent, "must have kept near to the great river Euphrates, for it watered the southern face of Babylon's ramparts and upon it opened one of the great city's gates dedicated to the god Uras. It led away southward to Dilbat, which, as the newly found records inform us, was built between the canal and the Euphrates, for some of the tablets refer to pieces of property described as within the city or its suburbs, as bounded by the river, and others by the canal. As the present natives of the district will not reveal the site of their find we unfortunately do not yet know precisely where Dilbat stood.

"The Arahtu Canal not only watered the soil and so produced the crops but carried upon its surface the harvests it had created. Thus an old text says it was the 'bringer of life to Babylon.' Dilbat was probably the great southern granary for the capital, for Hammurabi, in his long autobiographical panegyric, boasts that he 'extended the plantations of Dilbat and accumulated corn for Ip.'

"When the Arahtu was first constructed it would be difficult to say, but its benefits to their people caused the kings always to keep it in repair, and vice versa, invaders of Babylonia in war time damaged it as a preliminary to starving out the capital.

"The special deity of Dilbat was Ip, probably a shortened form of Nimip, and his temple was called Imbi Anum, 'Proclaimed of Anu.' There was a city wall coeval with the foundation of the city, and restored by King Sumu-Abu, predecessor of Hammurabi. The town appears to have possessed three harbors or docks and a market, and one can imagine the busy hum of commerce upon

ITS STREETS AND WHARVES

"The documents rescued from its ruins almost all concern the sale, or renting of houses and lands and fields, or the hire and purchase of cattle and crops, Dilbat being the centre of a rich agricultural district. The terms employed are common to all the Babylonian cities. The ground and the houses are clearly defined by the enumeration of neighboring properties and the names of their proprietors.

"Frequently the boundary is a street, a canal, a pond or harbor. Then, in cases of real estate, follows a statement of value, the names of vender and purchaser, and at the end of the bargain, the deed discloses, comes the oath sworn before the god of the city in the temple and also an invocation of the reigning King. The Dilbat scribes also added a clause placing

THE RECORD OFFICE.

"In case of dispute as to its accuracy, for an extra sum the outer envelope was broken and compared with its interior duplicate text; and the litigant who proved to be in error in his allegation that the two versions were not identical paid a considerable forfeit, and a new outer case was placed over the original tablet and reinscribed. This procedure is mentioned in the Old Testament as inquiring of the outer and the inner tablet of a deed.

"The fellahin with their picks and shovels have, however, broken most of the outer covers of the Dilbat documents. These methods for the enregisterization of transactions necessitating legal formalities to enable them to be cited as 'evidence' in the law courts, or the municipal tribunal (for in one case, at least, the Mayor was the judge) were similar to those at other contemporary neighboring cities, but they possess their own peculiar phraseology, proving that Dilbat had his own type of citizen, though comparatively an insignificant town. So a flourishing school of scribes and solicitors doubtless crowded the shady corridors of its temple and the halls of the god's tribunal.

"Truly its prosperity was but a reflex of that of Babylon, but the city's existence was not ephemeral, for it commenced with the first regions of the great neighboring cities' kings and endured until

THE PERSIAN ERA.

"The majority of the tablets found often merely reregister plots, areas or locations, for most of the litigation was about boundaries. Others, however, are for loans or hiring agreements, one being for a period of three months only. Huzulum hires a bull from the great temple gods of Sippara, Samsash and Aia for a year. Doubtless the joint deities had a shrine at Dilbat and a farm for sacrificial cattle and did a thriving trade in stud cattle and rams.

"People also hired out chariots and agricultural implements, but loans were mostly in money and seed corn. The interest for the latter sometimes amounted to 36 per cent., but it was payable in kind out of what it provided, and if the farmer had parted in the previous season with his reserve of seed, because of a specially high offer for it, he could afford to pay such interest to obtain a fresh supply.

"Some deeds concern the hiring of harvesters, and they were often registered before the engagement matured by the crops ripening. A clause was therefore inserted that if the men contracted for failed to appear the farmer could hire others at the price paid that season by the king for his own estates, and it may be presumed that the person who had promised to supply the men made up the difference if any.

"Such was life at Dilbat about 2,000 years before the Christian era, as revealed by the small clay tablets that the patient industry of many intellects have for the love of science enabled us to read."

9. The book of the law of Jehovah—This is the sole account of the general diffusion of a knowledge of the law through a mission, the other method (mentioned in connection with the reign of Josiah and the return from the Exile) being to read it aloud before popular assemblies.

10-13—The greatness of Jehoshaphat.

10. The fear of Jehovah—The marginal reading, "a terror from Jehovah," is better. The people neighboring upon Judah were visited with a supernatural dread of the growing power of this pious king. Compare 2 Chron. 14 13, 14. This fear was a reward, the chronicler would have us believe, for Jehoshaphat's zeal for the law.

11. Arabians—"People of the desert." Here, the powerful kingdom of Nabateans south and southeast of Judah. The tribute mentioned is very heavy (compare 2 Kings 3. 4).

Mighty men of valor—The numbering of this vast army is given in the succeeding verses. There seems to be doubt as to the exactness of the chronicler's figures. Throughout he has a special interest in statistics, and his estimates are generally higher than those in the Kings.

THE INVITATION.

The living Lord of truth and grace Presents from storm a hiding place: He calls you each to seek His face, And come just as you are.

He knows the nature of your sin; He gave Himself your souls to win; He calls you now to enter in And come just as you are.

Amid the frowning mountain peaks His lost and erring ones He seeks: He bids you come to Him who speaks, And come just as you are.

Your state will not itself improve; He only can your stains remove: He calls you to embrace His love, And come just as you are.

Because His mercy is so great No longer in the darkness wait, But come before it be too late, And come just as you are.

Unto His precious promise cleave: With all your heart in Him believe: Just now His saving grace receive, And come just as you are.

HIS INSATIABLE "CURIOSITY"

One day, after he had asked his mother several million questions, she said to him: "Jimmy, for pity's sake, stop asking questions. You drive me frantic. Don't you know that curiosity killed a cat?" Jimmy was crushed, and for a long time was silent. At last he went to his mother and asked: "Ma what did that cat want to know?"

CAKES.

Lemon Walnut Cake.—One cup granulated sugar, two tablespoons butter, two eggs, one teaspoon vanilla extract, two cups flour, two teaspoons baking powder, one cup milk, one-half pound English walnuts. Cream the butter and sugar until as light as whipped cream, then add the eggs, well beaten separately, then add vanilla and beat altogether hard. Now sift flour and baking powder together thrice, and to this add walnuts chopped coarsely. Now add this to the beaten mixture with the milk alternately, and bake in a loaf forty-five minutes. Lemon frosting: White of one egg beaten stiff, one cup confectioners' sugar, two teaspoons lemon juice and grated rind of one-half lemon. Beat hard together and spread on bottom and sides of cake when cool.

Devil Food Cake.—Two cupfuls brown sugar, two eggs, one teaspoonful soda, one-half cupful boiling water, two teaspoonfuls baking powder, one-quarter teaspoonful ground cinnamon, one-half cupful butter, one-third cake unsweetened chocolate, one-half cupful sour milk or cream, two and one-quarter cupfuls flour, one teaspoonful vanilla. Melt the chocolate, add to the hot water, roll the sugar until free from lumps, cream the butter and sugar together, pour the chocolate over the butter and sugar, add the soda to the sour milk, then eggs, add baking powder and cinnamon to the flour, beat until mixed, add vanilla, bake in loaf in a very slow oven, frost with white frosting.

Tutti Frutti Cake.—Two cups of sugar, one cup of butter, one cup of milk, four cups of flour, whites of five eggs, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Divide into four parts, leaving one part plain. To one part add a half cup of chopped English walnuts, to another a half cup of chopped raisins and citron, to the third part a half cup of fresh grated cocoanut, and the grated rind of a lemon, or part of an orange. Bake each in a lay tin, and when baked and cold put together with white icing. Have the bottom of the plain cake, the next layer that containing the raisins and citrons, the next the nut layer, and have the cocoanut layer on top.

DESSERTS.

Apricot Float.—One pint of crushed apricots, two eggs, two cupfuls of pulverized sugar, one pint of milk, vanilla and almonds. Run the apricots through a colander and crush as fine as possible. Separate the whites of the eggs from the yolks, beat the former to a stiff, dry froth, and add the sugar. Put in the crushed apricots, gradually beating all the while, until the whole is a stiff pile of yellow cream; then place in a glass dish and set on ice. Beat the yolks of the eggs in half a cupful of milk, place the remainder of the milk on the stove in a granite pan set in another containing boiling water, and when the milk is hot add the beaten yolks, stir until the liquid is like thick cream, add salt, sugar and vanilla to taste and set on ice.

About once a week prepare a good lather of hot water and soap, and into it dip the broom; shake it until it is nearly dry and hang it up, with the bristles downwards, until quite so.

Be especially careful to bring starched clothes in as soon as they are dry. When it is cold the freezing takes out the stiffness, and when the weather is damp the clothes become limp.

Turn glasses and tumbler on their sides before pouring hot dish water over them, and you will find it saves many breakages. The hot water covers the entire glass, heating it all at once.

If grease is spilled on a wooden table pour cold water over it at once. The cold water will harden the grease and prevent its sinking into the wood. It can then be easily removed with a knife.

MURDERER THE JURY FOREMAN

Judge Learns Reason for Verdict of Acquittal in Face of Strongest Testimony

In the year 1725 a man named William Harper was placed on trial in Essex County, England, for the murder of Samuel Carman. His reputation previous to this charge had been that of an honest, industrious man, temperate in his habits, kind in disposition and truthful in character.

The facts developed by the witnesses on the trial showed that a neighbor in passing a field discovered the body of the murdered man, who had evidently come to his death of wounds inflicted by the prongs of a spading fork. A fork of that description with blood upon it was found lying upon the ground beside the corpse, with the initials W.H. cut on the handle, and was subsequently identified as belonging to Harper. Tracks were also found about the murdered man unquestionably made by Harper's boots, and it was further shown that some time previously there had been considerable ill feeling between the accused and the deceased. Early in the morning of the day of the murder the accused was dressed in a certain suit of light clothes, but when arrested a few hours later he was attired in black. He denied having changed his garments, but upon a search of his house the missing suit, all bespattered with blood, was found hidden away in the interior of a straw bed.

The accused brought no witnesses into court, and when asked by the judge what testimony he proposed to offer, he replied that he "had no witnesses but God and his own conscience."

On being questioned he made the following explanation:

He said that he owned a field adjoining that in which the body was found. On the fatal morning he went early to his work, and in passing through the field he saw a man lying near the path as if dead or drunk, and he felt himself bound to see what the man's condition really was and to offer him succor if he should stand in need of it. On examination he found him in a dying condition, with two frightful wounds in his breast, from which a large quantity of blood was discharged. He carefully raised the wounded man and earnestly endeavored to learn from him the name of his assailant. The dying man attempted to speak, but the words died in a horrid rattle, the blood gushed from his mouth and he fell backward dead.

The shock caused by the sudden death, he said, was indescribable. He no sooner found himself alone with the dead than he thought of the altercation which had taken place between them, and the fear that he might be accused of the murder took entire possession of him. In his terror he ran away, thoughtlessly taking with him the dead man's spading fork and leaving behind his own, upon the handle of which the initials of his the jury a severe reprimand, refused to have the verdict recorded, and sent them back to their room. The night was spent in endeavoring to convince the foreman, but no impression was made. When morning came the weary men saw escape from their unpleasant position but in agreeing, and again determined upon a verdict of "not guilty," and pledged themselves to adhere to it, whatever the judge might say or think concerning it.

The judge, as expected, was exceedingly indignant at the finding, but he was powerless to change it, and the accused was discharged.

The conduct of the foreman was soon fully known to the court, and the sheriff was summoned to give any information he could concerning him. The character he gave the man was so highly favorable that the judge found his curiosity excited, and he directed him to bring the man to his private office, as he was determined to know what honest reason could have induced him to struggle so hard for a verdict which was so palpably against reason and justice.

On his being introduced the judge invited him into his private room, and frankly told him that he felt as though his conduct on the jury had been without excuse or palliation, but, from the good character which he bore among his neighbors, he was unable to decide that his judgment had been purchased and he, therefore, as a matter of curiosity, desired him to give any reason, if possible, for his singular and apparently unreasonable stubbornness. The jurymen responded that he had good and sufficient reasons for the course he himself to the authorities. When he considered, however, how long he would probably be confined, awaiting trial, and how his crops and other interests would be likely to suffer during his confinement, he concluded not to do so.

When, however, Harper was arrested for the crime he fully resolved to surrender himself, and consulted an eminent lawyer concerning the matter. After considering the case in all its aspects he was advised to do all in his power to secure the acquittal of the accused, but if he should fail to accomplish it, he was then to declare his own guilt in order to save Mr. Harper.

Indirectly he contributed freely to the defence, caused Harper's family to be amply provided for, and finally succeeded in getting himself on the jury and becoming its foreman. The rest of the story has been told.

Mr. Harper never knew who was the perpetrator of the mysterious murder for which he came so near meeting an ignominious death, or suspected the cause of Mr. Fenn's kindness to himself and family, as he died a few years after the trial. At Harper's death Fenn adopted two of the children and provided

Combination Salad.—First, layer of crisp green lettuce in small pieces; second, peeled and sliced tomatoes; third, about a cupful boiled cold green string beans, whole; fifth, one small cucumber, sliced very thin; sixth, one onion chopped fine; seventh, green Bell pepper, one large one chopped fine; eighth, one or two hard boiled eggs, chopped and sprinkled all over; ninth, sprinkle with salt and pepper; tenth, one-half cupful mild vinegar and lemon juice, half and half, poured over it; eleventh, two tablespoonfuls good salad or olive oil; twelfth, top with mayonnaise dressing. Build up in pyramid shape and trim with green and black olives and pimentos. Keep cold till served on platter.

Heart Salad.—Use canned beets. Slice thin, with small heart shaped cutter, cut the red beet hearts. Pare a cucumber with a scalloping knife, then slice thin with an ordinary knife. Arrange red beet hearts in center of plate on lettuce leaves; place thin slices of cucumber around as a border. Each slice of cucumber will have a scalloped edge and with care in paring the cucumber can also be made heart shaped.

Chicken Rice.—Soak a half cup of rice in some water for a half hour, drain and tie up in thin white cloth with plenty of room to swell. Put this bag in with your boiled chicken or boiling beef and you have a most delicious dish. Let boil about one hour slowly.

USEFUL HINTS.

The "Parliament of Dunces," convened by Henry IV. at Coventry, in 1404, was so called because all lawyers were excluded from it.

In 1849 the House of Commons formally abolished the House of Lords, and in the same year a peer sat as a member of the Commons.

Prior to the time of the Stuarts, members of Parliament were paid a regular wage for their services by the constituencies returning them.

The present House of Commons and House of Lords were represented in Anglo-Saxon times by the Folkmoot or Council of the people, and the Witenagemot or Council of the Chiefs.

The shortest Parliament lasted for one day only, and decreed the deposition of King Richard II. The four next shortest lasted seven, twelve, fourteen, and twenty days respectively.

The "Parliament of Bats" assembled during the regency in the reign of Henry VI. Its members were forbidden to carry swords, so they came to the House of Commons with bats or clubs.

Parliaments have sat in strange places. One was held by Edward I. under an oak tree in Sherwood forest. Another, called the "Black Parliament," was convened by Henry VIII. in Bridewell Gaol.

So little was the right of returning members to Parliament esteemed in the days of the early Tudor Kings, that many boroughs paid considerable sums of money for the "privilege" of being disfranchised.

Now that Russia, Turkey and Persia have each achieved or been granted constitutional government of a kind, there are only three countries in the world without a Parliament. They are China, Morocco, and the tiny principality of Monaco.

When the King opens Parliament in State the Crown and the Cap of Maintenance figures largely in the ceremony. Each is borne before his Majesty by a nobleman of high rank, the Crown on a cushion of crimson velvet, the Cap on the top of a short white staff, for these emblems of royal rank may not be touched by any hands but the hands of the Sovereign.

"Parliament Undertakers" was the name given to the little group of great nobles who, till William Pitt's administration, returned fully half the members of the House of Commons. More than sixty seats were in the hands of Lord Downshire, the Ponsonbys, and the Beresfords alone. They undertook to manage Parliament in their own way, on their own terms, and largely in their own interests.

STARTING WITH SHEEP.

As a rule, sheep owners place too much importance upon the selection of the ram and too little upon the selection of good, uniform breeding ewes. There is no question but that a good, pure-bred ram can do much to improve a flock of grade ewes, but as the flock more nearly reaches perfection it is very necessary to devote more attention to selecting the breeding ewes, or else further improvement will be out of the question.

In starting with sheep, it is advisable to select a few good ewes and a pure-bred ram, and gradually enlarge the flock as we gain a better knowledge of the flock business.

the alteration which had taken place between them, and the fear that he might be accused of the murder took entire possession of him. In his terror he ran away, thoughtlessly taking with him the dead man's spading fork and leaving behind his own, upon the handle of which the initials of his name were carved. His clothes, he found, were besmeared with blood, and he changed and washed them, that they might not be evidence against him, so great was his fear of being accused of the crime.

This story of the accused told with every appearance of candor and with the most solemn appeals to heaven to witness the truth of every word he had uttered. True, he said, he had previously denied all knowledge of the affair, and particularly denied the changing of his clothing; but it was not guilt, but a very natural desire to avoid an admission which would be considered incompatible with his innocence. Falsehood, he said, had only confirmed the suspicions against him, and every effort he had made to conceal his innocent connection with the affair had only deepened the general conviction of his guilt; but now he spoke the truth. Of course, he was not believed.

This was all the prisoner's defense, and the judge submitted the case to the jury, making a very strong charge against the accused. He pathetically enlarged on the atrocity of the crime and laid no little stress on the circumstantial proof of guilt, notwithstanding the prisoner's assertions of innocence. The accused, he said, had indeed cooked up a plausible story, but in doing so he had admitted that he had previously lied, and thus impeached his own statement. He charged the jury to pay no attention to that statement; but proceeded to deliberate only on the sworn testimony, intimating that they might find a verdict without leaving their seats.

Upon this the foreman of the jury, Edward Fenn, arose and suggested to the judge that as this was a case of life and death, they would prefer to retire for consultation, and they were accordingly locked in.

It was about 2 o'clock in the afternoon when the jury went out, and, as the case was plain, no difficulty was apprehended in arriving at a verdict, so the court concluded to sit until they returned.

Hour after hour passed, and nothing was heard from the jury. At nine o'clock the judge's patience was exhausted and he despatched an officer for information concerning the cause of delay.

The messenger soon returned and privately informed the judge that eleven of the jury had been for conviction from the first, but the foreman stubbornly refused to acquiesce, and insisted, in the face of all the evidence, that the accused was not guilty.

Mr. Fenn was a man of strong mind and much persuasive power, while his associates were endowed with these qualities to a less degree than usual. They also became alarmed at the prospect of being kept in the jury-room all night, unless a verdict was reached, and finally yielded, went into court, and, through the foreman, rendered a verdict of not guilty.

The judge made no attempt to conceal his surprise and disgust at a verdict so contrary to the testimony in the case, and after giving

Mr. Harper never knew who was the perpetrator of the mysterious murder for which he came so near meeting an ignominious death, or suspected the cause of Mr. Fenn's readiness to himself and family, as he died a few years after the trial. At Harper's death Fenn adopted two of the children and provided liberally for the others.

Fifteen years after the confession above recorded Edward Fenn died, honored and respected by the whole community. After his death the judge made public the facts in this most singular case.

The total yearly revenue of our Empire exceeds £400,000,000.

There are 30,000 miles of railways in the British Empire.

About 12,130,000 net tons of shipping sail under the British flag.

Over one-fifth of the world's inhabitants belong to the British Empire.

The British Empire occupies approximately one-fifth of the earth's surface.

Nearly 265,000,000 tons of shipping enter and clear annually at British ports.

The two most populous cities in the British Empire are London and Calcutta.

Last year it cost £13,484,117 to educate the children of the United Kingdom.

About 54 millions of the subjects of King George are white, and 344 millions colored.

The population of the British Empire is about equal to that of China, and more numerous than that of any other country.

The British Empire means "that portion of the earth's land surface which is subject to the authority of King George."

In 1885 our present King was promoted to the rank of naval lieutenant, and five years later was given the command of the gunboat Thrush on the North American station.

The nations outside the British Empire possessing the largest extent of territory are: Russia, 8,000,000 square miles; United States, 3,623,000 square miles, and Brazil, 3,220,000.

On two occasions have public Thanksgiving Services been held in St. Paul's, following our late King's recovery from illness—once while he was Prince of Wales and, later, after the Coronation.

The full title of King George is: "His Most Excellent Majesty George the Fifth, by the Grace of God, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, and of the British Dominions beyond the seas, King, Defender of the Faith, Emperor of India."

Synopsis of Canadian Northwest Land Regulations.

ANY person who is the sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. The applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the district. Entry by proxy may be made at any agency, on certain conditions, by father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister of intending homesteader.

Duties—Six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 30 acres, solely owned and occupied by him or his father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter section alongside his homestead. Price, $100 per acre.

Duties—Must reside six months in each of six years from date of homestead entry (including the time required to earn homestead patent and cultivate fifty acres extra).

A homesteader who has exhausted his homestead right and cannot obtain a pre-emption may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $500 per acre. Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate fifty acres and erect a house worth $500.00.

"Judge Teetzel says he would not permit the naturalization of foreigners until such time as they have demonstrated their fitness for citizenship rights in this country by a sufficient mastery of the English language, both spoken and written, to enable them to not only understand but make themselves understood as well in that tongue. This seems like pretty sound talk, what about illiterate Canadians? Should there not also be some kind of educational qualification on their part before they are permitted to exercise the franchise?"

Try Zam-Buk For Piles.

Read How This Sufferer Benefitted.

Don't you believe that experience is better than hearsay? If you suffer from piles, just try Zam-Buk. You can do so at our expense. So assured are we of the result that we will send you a free trial box if you send to our Toronto offices full name and address and a 1 cent stamp to pay return postage.

Scores of people daily acquaint us with the benefit they have derived from the use of Zam-Buk. Mr. F. Astridge, of St. Paul St., St. Catharines, Ont., says: "For five years I have suffered untold agony with protruding piles. The pain was so great at times I would almost scream."

"I lost weight and had no appetite. I tried everything I ever heard of for piles, as I was willing to take anything to get relief. It was useless, however, and I almost gave up in despair."

One day a friend gave me a sample of Zam-Buk, and told me of a friend of his who had been cured. I decided to try Zam-Buk, and the relief I got was encouraging. I used three boxes, and at the end of that time I was completely cured. I wish I could have got Zam-Buk years ago; it would have saved me a great deal of misery."

Zam-Buk will also be found a sure cure for cold sores, chapped hands, frost bite, ulcers, blood-poison, varicose sores, scalp sores, ringworms, inflamed patches, babies eruptions and chapped places, cuts, burns, bruises, and skin injuries generally. All druggists and stores sell at 50c. box, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, upon receipt of price. You are warned against harmful imitations and substitutes. See the registered name, "Zam-Buk," on every package.

There will be plenty more to see further on."

Just a Summer Dog.

A little boy was entertaining the minister the other day until his mother could complete her toilet. The minister to make congenial conversation inquired:

"Have you a dog?"
"Yes, sir, a dachshund," responded the lad.

"Where is he?" questioned the dominie, knowing the way to a boy's heart.
"Father sends him away for the winter. He says it takes him so long to go in and out the door he cools the whole house off."

A Tank at Radcliffe.

To the list of famous misprints should be added that ascribed to Miss Irwin, dean of Radcliffe College, who was made to say in an annual report that the new swimming tank at Radcliffe had a capacity of 20,000 gals.—Christian Register.

Well Answered.

"What would you say," said the mournful prophet of woe, "if I were to tell you that in a short space of time all the rivers in this country would dry up?"
"I would say," said the patient man, "Go thou and do likewise."

Goblets.

Goblets with stem and stand like those we use to-day were employed in Troy 900 B.C. Among the valuable objects found by Dr. Schliemann was a golden goblet. Vessels of this metal were commonly employed in the service of the temples.

His Drawback.

"They tell me," said the junior partner, "that the man to whom we have been sending so many bills belongs to a rather fast set."
"Well," answered the senior partner, "he may belong to the fast set, but he's a rather slow settler."

Some Time Ago.

Studious Boy—Father, did you ever study arithmetic? Father (indignant)—Of course I studied arithmetic. Studious Boy—Well, I can't find the cube root of— Father (hastily)—It's a long while since I studied it.

Different Effects.

"The same thing will make entirely different impressions on different readers," remarked the man who writes.
"Quite so," replied the lawyer. "Letters which bring tears to a girl's eyes frequently make a jury laugh."

Setting Her Right.

Aunt Rachel—I see you've patched it up with Archie, and he's coming here again oftener than ever. He's asked you to marry him fifty times, hasn't he?
Miss Mandy—Oh, dear no, aunty, but I suppose he has asked me fifty times to marry him.

With and Without.

"Oh, doctor," exclaimed a rheumatic patient, "I suffer dreadfully with my hands and feet."
"But, my dear sir," rejoined the physician, "just try to think how much inconvenience you would suffer without them."

Pert.

Miss Tottie—Auntie, make Johnny quit saying mean things to me.
Aunt Lottie—Mercy, child! You're both of you bad children. What's he been saying now?
Miss Tottie—He says I've a worse temper'n you have.

"The Honorable and Respected."

A curious old Bavarian custom is just about to be altered in Bavaria by the Minister of Justice. Criminals executed in the prison of Straubing have hitherto been buried with memorial crosses placed over them stating, "Here lies the honorable and respected So-and-so," if the criminal were a married man, while the graves of the condemned and executed bachelors bore the words, "Here lies the virtuous So-and-so." It has now been decided in future to inter them without any such complimentary remarks.—London Standard.

Precaution.

The family were fabulously wealthy, yet here was their baby being born with a plated spoon in its mouth. How came that about? The young parents, observing our perplexity, led us aside.

"The silver spoon is kept in the safety vault and a cheap substitute used in its stead. One is never sure of one's servants these days," they explained in a confidential whisper.

Versatile.

"How do you intend to mask at the ball?" asked the sweet, gushing thing of the lanky, baldheaded cutup.

"I don't know whether I shall chalk my head and go as a billiard cue or braid my legs and represent a whip-lash," he responded.—St. Paul Pioneer Press.

POWER OF HYPNOTISM.

Remarkable Cure of a Persistent Case of Hallucination.

Writing in The American Magazine of the remarkable cures effected by four great medical experts through the means of hypnotism, H. Addington Bruce describes a case which was successfully treated by Dr. Pierre Janet, the noted Parisian specialist:

"The patient suffered from a persistent hallucination of seeing a man in the room with her. Her relatives believed that she was insane and wished to place her in an asylum, as she occasionally manifested suicidal tendencies. But Dr. Janet diagnosed her case as one of hysteria and with the aid of hypnotism made the interesting discovery that the hallucinatory image which she thought she saw was the figure of a lover who had deserted her several years before. It appeared that every time she thought of her faithless sweetheart his image rose before her.

"To Janet it seemed a perfectly simple matter to 'suggest' away the hallucination by impressing upon her during hypnosis the idea that when she awoke she would no longer see the imaginary form. But he found that for some reason the suggestion would not 'take.' Day after day he patiently hypnotized her, always without success. Finally he began to suspect that at bottom she did not want to be cured and that the passionate desire to see her lover, if only as a phantasm, constituted too strong a 'self suggestion' to overcome by direct attack. Another method would have to be tried.

"Very well," he one day said to her while she was hypnotized 'if you want to continue seeing your lover, you shall see him. But, remember, you will always see him with the head and face of a pig.'

"He then brought her out of the hypnotic sleep into her natural state. Five minutes later she uttered a cry and covered her eyes with her hands. 'What is the matter?' inquired Dr. Janet calmly.

"It is terrible! Terrible!" she exclaimed. 'I see a man standing in the corner of the room, and his face is like a pig's!'

"How absurd!" said Dr. Janet. "After this he left her to her own devices, no longer hypnotizing her. For a few days she complained that everywhere she went she saw the man with the face of a pig. Gradually the hallucinatory image faded and at length entirely disappeared, leaving her restored to perfect health. As Dr. Janet afterward explained, the grotesque hallucination which he had succeeded in impressing upon her had brought about a profound revulsion of feeling. Manifestly she could not love a man with a pig's head. She no longer wanted to see her sweetheart or to think of him, and in proportion as she ceased to think of him the hallucination disappeared."

A Healthy Village.

There is at least one spot in the world where everybody is happy, prosperous and well. The only people who didn't get on there are chemists, doctors and undertakers.

In the village of Cobena, near Madrid, disease and death are practically unknown. Two years ago the local chemist, in despair, gave up the sale of drugs and took to selling sweet-stuffs and confectionery. As there hasn't been a death for eight years, half the cemetery has been turned into a pleasure garden, and the undertaker has fled the place.

The doctor, who had been living for years on his capital, hoping against hope, recently decided to emigrate. The inhabitants generously decided to raise a subscription to help him on his way, but, no—he would not accept charity from those who had so persistently declined to oblige him in the usual way.

SPENDTHRIFT BALZAC.

Extravagance of the Man Who Had a Mountain of Debts.

"With Balzac's rising fame rises the mountain of his debts," writes a critic. "These, starting from his two disastrous years of printing and publishing in Paris, accumulated until at the top of his literary renown he had to hide from his creditors in a garret under the name of his landlady or his washerwoman. In 1837 Balzac, at that date the best known and the most debated novelist in France, owed 162,000 francs (about $32,500). Then he must needs buy a cane which was the talk of Paris, some gold buttons for a new coat, a 'divine opera glass' and a dressing gown beyond words and give a dinner to the dandies of the opera respecting which Rossini said that 'he had not seen more magnificence when he dined at royal tables.'

"Balzac three times a millionaire would still have buried himself in debt, for the mental exaltation of his creative hours was reproduced when he broke loose from the galley bench. He lavished in anticipation the wealth he had dreamed would be his. This gone, he borrowed anew or devised another of those schemes that were to enrich him beyond the possibilities of literature. His schemes were essentially a part of Balzac, the sovereign, unconquerable visionary.

"He would transport oaks from Poland to France—Nothing like oaks from Poland to make your fortune

Story of the Ingenious Nephew and His Witty Uncle.

While this perhaps has nothing to do with current literature, we jot it down because it impressed us as being illustrative as well as any story that we have ever heard of the peculiar quality of Italian humor. Fasolacci is a youth of much elegance and little discretion. He has been spending right and left, and one day he finds himself unable to pay his hotel bill. Owing to the avarice of his father, he appeals to his uncle:

"Dear Uncle—If you could see my shame while I write you would pity me. Do you know why? Because I have to ask you for 100 francs and know not how to express my humble gratitude."

"No, it is impossible to tell you! I prefer to die."

"I send you this by a messenger, who awaits an answer."

"Believe me, dear uncle, your most obedient and affectionate nephew, FASOLACCI."

"P.S.—Overcome with shame for what I have written, I have been running after the messenger in order to take the letter from him, but I could not catch up with him. Heaven grant that something may happen to stop him or that this letter may be lost."

The uncle receives the letter, is touched by its contents, considers and replies:

"My Beloved Nephew—Console yourself and blush no longer. Providence heard your prayer. The messenger lost your letter. Good-bye."

"Your affectionate uncle, 'ARISTIPPO.'"

The Driving of Destiny.

There is a great deal of sound sense in the old Calvinistic doctrine of the sovereignty of God; that is, that there is a wisdom and power in the universe that is doing about as it pleases, and that we will get along better if we try to find out what its plans are and to work with them.

A man's mastery over the beasts is not due to his superior strength. The elephant can push him over, the horse can pull more, and the lion can best him naked and bare handed. But he controls the brute simply because he is wise enough to reach up and get hold of forces in nature more powerful than either the animals or himself.

All his pre-eminence is in knowing how to use nature's hidden, giant energies. He drives the horse because he knows how to make a bit and put it in the horse's mouth, and the horse does not know enough to spit it out. He chases the lion because he can make a spear or a gun; while the lion never gets further than muscle and claws. He can pull as much as a thousand elephants because he can harness steam and electricity.

In the same way the leader among men need not be the strongest, physically or mentally. But he must be the one who knows how to use the great elemental forces that are stronger than men. He sees quickly the driving of destiny and goes that way.

Seeking Protection.

In spite of his well-known poor marksmanship a certain Englishman was invited to the country for a day's shooting. The attendant in great disgust witnessed miss after miss.

"Dear me," at last exclaimed the sportsman, "but the birds seem exceptionally strong on the wing this year!"

"Not all of 'em, sir," came the remark. "You've shot at the same bird this last dozen times. 'E's follering you about, sir."

"Following me about. Nonsense. Why should a bird do that?"

"I dunno, sir, I'm sure," replied the man, "unless 'e's angling round for safety."

A New Passion Play.

The authorities of Eisenach, Germany, have given their consent to the production in that city of a Protestant Passion play on the lines of that of Oberammergau. The play, which will be known as 'The Life of Jesus,' is the work of Dr. Weiser, director of the Weimar Theatre. The performance will require four evenings, and it is proposed that the play shall be given only once in a year. The various parts have already been allotted to actors of ability, and the financial risk has been assumed by a committee of wealthy men. Among the promoters are the Grand Duke of Saxe-Weimar and the Duke of Meiningen. The first performance will take place next summer.

THIS BOOK FREE

After you have read "When Poultry Pays"—read the host of facts that it has to offer you—you will realize why poultry-raising ranks among the biggest single industries in the world.

THE PEERLESS WAY

CO-OPERATION, the corner-stone on which The Peerless Way rests, is the factor that is building up the poultry industry in Canada,—is the factor that has made possible the big profits in this business. This book, "When Poultry Pays,"—the book that goes to you FREE on request—is a volume you cannot afford to be without if you are even the least bit interested in better-strain fowl, more eggs, higher prices, assured markets; in short, in

The Poultry Method That Ensures Success In The Canadian Climate.

The Peerless Way is more than merely a system for raising poultry—it is a system that is complete from the moment the chick is hatched until either the fowl or its eggs has put profits into your pocket. The Peerless Way is both a poultry-raising system and a co-operative marketing method.

The Peerless Way will show you how to "make good" in hatching and brooding—in rearing your chicks—in feeding them right—and bringing them most quickly to market size or to egg production—to the profit stage. The Peerless Way will find you a market at highest prices!—and for spot cash! That is an important part of the service. The Peerless Way guarantees absolutely to put you in touch with buyers who will take off your hands every cent's worth of your entire output at top-notch figures.

Offers You Co-Operation In Breeding, Rearing and Marketing In The Most Productive Branch Of Agriculture.

Canada, with all her natural advantages and her special adaptability to the breeding of an extremely hardy strain of poultry, needs only to be awakened to take her proper place as the greatest poultry country in the world. But that awakening must come through YOU—each individual farmer, poultryman—each Canadian—must realize what a veritable gold-mine this field has to offer if it is only worked and worked RIGHT! And The Peerless Way is forcing this awakening—has already awakened 15,000 Canadian poultrymen to the possibilities of the industry—and CAN show you. The Peerless Way will show you the unequalled poultry country for extension that exists in the poultry business—how its numerous and varied branches are capable of rhythmic combination and union; it will illustrate how the business may be adapted to your locality, either as an individual business of considerable size or as a work secondary to some other, either upon enlarged or confined limits.

Get Into An Under-Supplied Market With Rising Prices

When you stop to consider how the prices of both poultry and eggs have doubled within the last ten years, you can readily see that the market is away under-supplied—that the business must be a tremendous money-maker for someone. Why should not you be among those who are taking the easy profit? You can be as successful as any poultry-raiser in Canada if you will only let The Peerless Way show you how—if you will only follow out our methods, and devote just a little time and more or less common-sense to the work. Poultry-raising is a long way from being over-done. One user of The Peerless Way sold nearly a quarter of a million fowl last year—over twenty-five carloads. And he started just as YOU can start—with practically no investment at all. Do not put this off—it only costs a two-cent stamp to know—write now for the book and the proof. Put the burden of proof up to us and make us prove our case—we can. Merely send the coupon.

ANOTHER WOMAN CURED

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Gardiner, Maine.—"I have been a great sufferer from organic troubles and a severe female weakness. The doctor said I would have to go to the hospital for an operation, but I could not bear to think of it. I decided to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Sanative Wash—and was entirely cured after three months' use of them."—Mrs. S. A. WILLIAMS, R. F. D. No. 14, Box 39, Gardiner, Me.

No woman should submit to a surgical operation, which may mean death, until she has given Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made exclusively from roots and herbs, a fair trial.

This famous medicine for women has for thirty years proved to be the most valuable tonic and renewer of the female organism. Women residing in almost every city and town in the United States bear willing testimony to the wonderful virtue of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It cures female ills, and creates radiant, buoyant female health. If you are ill, for your own sake as well as those you love, give it a trial.

Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., invites all sick women to write her for advice. Her advice is free, and always helpful.

THE WEREWOLVES.

Fantastic Story of a Sixteenth Century Tragedy.

John of Nuremberg relates how a man, lost at night in a strange country, directed his steps toward a fire that he saw before him. On reaching it he found a wolf sitting enjoying its warmth and was informed by him that he was really as human as himself, but that he was compelled for a certain number of years, like all his countrymen, to assume the shape of a wolf.

A strange country, indeed, where wolves when the evenings grow chilly light a fire and in the comfort of its ruddy glow are found ready to entertain the passing traveler with their conversation!

Olaus Magnus in the early part of the sixteenth century tells us a story of a nobleman and his retinue who lost their way in journeying through a wild forest and presently found themselves hopelessly foodless and shelterless. In the urgency of their need one of the servants disclosed to him in confidence that he had the power of turning himself at will into a wolf and doubted not but that, if his master would kindly excuse him for a while, he would be able to find the party some provision. Permission being given, the man disappeared into the forest under semblance of a wolf and very quickly returned with a lamb in his mouth and then, having fulfilled his mission, resumed his human form.

As He Heard It.

The young man stood hesitating upon the steps until the shrill, girlish voices died away and Alice opened the door.

"Oh! Have you been here long?" she exclaimed.

"Only about five minutes," he replied, availing himself in a hesitating manner of her invitation to enter.

"Then you heard us?"

"Er—well, a little, you know. I really couldn't help it. I was just about to go, you know"—he stammered.

"About to go—why?"

"Thought I might be inopportune, you know. Realize that such things are bound to occur once in awhile, you know; really can't be helped. Even most sweet-tempered persons!"

"What are you speaking of, Mr. Southleigh?" Alice demanded suspiciously.

"Why—er—of course I wouldn't have presumed to mention it, you know! My brother and I—every once in awhile—we do really!"

"You do really—what?"

"Er—quarrel, you know."

Alice looked coldly out of the window.

"When you came," she said evenly, "my sister and I were singing our new duet."

War Heroes of the Future.

The romance of battle, which seemed over with the passing of its cavalry charge—no longer possible against machine gun fire—returns on wings. Individualism of exploit returns. An army ceases to be simply an aggregation of units in khaki with no one counting more than another. One man's daring initiative may be worth regiments, as in the old days.

The next great war promises heroes by the hundreds, and there will be no convenient life raft to take them back to kisses and public applause. Once his plane is out of action the aviator scout drops to death. It is probable that a general will send out first a feinting flotilla of planes to draw the enemy's planes in chase before he sends out the one on which he depends for information, or he may dispatch a flock scattered at wide intervals of distance, knowing that if all of them except one are destroyed the return of that one will be enough.

What news that lucky one will bring—news which will make war to the commander-in-chief a game of chess in which he knows all the moves in his opponent's mind!

A TURBULENT VOLCANO.

The Boiling Hot Pools of Taal, in the Philippines.

The central or main crater of Taal is nearly round. Its diameter on an air line north and south is 6,233 feet and the east-west diameter 7,540 feet. The edge of this crater is somewhat irregular, but is nowhere broken through, its highest point standing at only 1,350 feet above sea level and its lowest at 426 feet.

Within the rim are two hot pools, known respectively as the yellow and the green lake, and a little active cone above fifty feet in height from which escape steam and sulphurous gas in varying quantities.

In the smaller lake every few minutes the water in the center is blown up like an immense bubble, which, rising above the surface, finally bursts, revealing a black orifice and causing the boiling and very turbulent water to assume all imaginable colors. The aqueous vapor escaping is sufficient to form a broad, smokelike column which is visible especially during the night and in the early morning.

At some distance and before reaching the edge of the crater, where a view of the bottom can be obtained, the bubbling sound produced by the Engineer and Fireman Killed and Brakeman Loses Right Arm.

(Kingston Whig.)

Hurled into eternity without more than five seconds' warning, with no chance even to jump, to save themselves, was the fate of two men who were instantly killed in a terrible wreck, which occurred on the Grand Trunk railway about half a mile east of Collins Bay at 1.30 o'clock, Monday morning. The dead men are: William Dennis, of Belleville, engineer of train No. 94, and Thomas McDermott, of Belleville, fireman on the same train.

William Cunningham, of Gananoque, brakeman on the wrecked train, was riding in the cab of engine No. 94, and jumped to save himself. He was buried under a pile of wreckage. When next seen he was crawling from under the wrecked caboose, his right arm hanging by his side. As it was found that he was badly injured, the engine of the stalled train was detached and he was taken into Kingston and taken to the general hospital in Corbett's ambulance where his arm, which was badly mangled, was amputated.

The collision was rear-on. The train which was run into was a special which became stalled in Lemmon's cut owing to the fact that there were three dead engines on the rear of the train. As it was going over the grade it broke in two, leaving part of the train on the down grade. As soon as the cars became detached the air brakes worked automatically and the detached portion was brought to a standstill. Conductor Manson Smith, who was in charge of the first train, got off to see what was wrong, and told one of the brakemen to go back and flag No. 94, as he knew it was following close behind. The flagman started off on a run, but before he got many yards from the caboose the other train was upon him, running at the rate of about thirty miles an hour.

The impact was terrible. Engine No. 94 struck the caboose of the train in front and smashed it to kindling wood. It happened there were no trainmen in it at the time, else they would have been ground to pieces. There were three cars in front of the caboose and then came a dead engine. Two of the cars were box cars, and the other was a flat car. One of the box cars was loaded with flour, and as soon as the car was struck, the flour caught fire and added brilliantly to the scene. One of the box cars loaded with cotton was lifted completely off the tracks and tossed twenty-five feet into the air over a high bank. Another car loaded with bags of flour was turned over on the left hand track. When the car was tossed over the bank it took the telegraph wires with it, cutting off all communication with Kingston and points east.

As soon as the accident happened the auxiliary train and wrecking crew at Belleville were wired for and arrived at the scene of the catastrophe about four o'clock.

BODY OF FIREMAN FOUND.

The dead body of Thomas McDermott, the fireman on No. 94, was found shortly after the two trains came together, by one of the crew on No. 5 passenger train, which had run to the scene of the collision just after it occurred. The work of trying to rescue the bodies of the dead men was rendered very difficult and hazardous by the escaping steam, and the fire which broke out at once. Fireman McDermott was found in his cab, standing on his head. He was caught at his post, and must have died suddenly. The body was not mutilated.

The charred body of Engineer Dennis was found about ten o'clock under his engine by searchers, who never left off the search for his body. His body was burnt beyond recognition, only a few scraps of clothing remaining. His hand was found grasping the reverse lever.

The auxiliary train arrived from Belleville about 4.15 o'clock, and, under the direction of Assistant Superintendent Coleman, of Belleville, commenced the dangerous work of clearing the line. Fortunately there was not much on the north line and

THE INCUBATOR.

Practically the incubator marks the boundary between the conditions under which poultry growing may be made profitable and those under which it cannot be made to pay actual expense, normally at all events. Of course it must not be asserted on the strength of this that at all times and under all circumstances it is impossible to make a profit out of poultry raising without the help of the incubator. One man may have a particular strain of birds for which he can be sure of ready sale at fancy prices. Another may be located in a place where poultry products are sure to bring extravagant figures: while still another may have such a low cost of living, such a total lack of other employment, out of his hens by the old-fashioned methods of poultry production: but these will, after all, be found to be exceptions that prove the truth of the general rule.

The incubator is to the poultry raiser what the horse-rake or the self-binder is to the hay and grain grower, and all who have given it anything like a fair trial, will willingly bear testimony to this. One good sized incubator will do the hatching, which, if done by hens, would take up the time that would represent the laying of over nineteen dozen eggs worth, in round figures from three and a half to four dollars at moderate market rates for good fresh eggs for table purpose, while if produced by high class pure bred fowls, they would double or treble that sum at a low treble commutation. Then again, the life of a good, well-made incubator properly taken care of, is such that it need hardly enter into the farmer's calculations, and the cost of furnishing it with oil for one hatching of eggs, is also very trifling so that it is safe to reckon that the time spent by the hens in doing the work of ...the man would be able to and the party none provision. Permission being given, the man disappeared into the forest under semblance of a wolf and very quickly returned with a lamb in his mouth and then, having fulfilled his mission, resumed his human form.

In Auvergne in 1588 a nobleman in returning from the chase was stopped by a stranger, who told him that he had been furiously attacked by a savage wolf, but had been fortunate enough to save himself by slashing off one of his fore paws. This he produced as a trophy, when, to the astonishment of both, it was found to have become the delicate hand of a lady. The nobleman felt so sure that he recognized a ring upon it that he hurried to the castle and there found his wife sitting with her arm tied up, and on removing the wrappers the hand was missing. She had to stand her trial as a loup-garou and, being convicted, perished at the stake.

...ous vapor escaping is sufficient to form a broad, smokelike column which is visible especially during the night and in the early morning.

At some distance and before reaching the edge of the crater, where a view of the bottom can be obtained, the rumbling sound produced by the escaping vapor, under the influence of the mysterious subterranean forces, can be heard like that of an immense boiling kettle.

The greatest eruption of Taal took place in 1754. The eruption began on May 13 and did not end till Dec. 1. During this dreadful time the intensity and aspect of the eruption were continually changing, and the four principal towns of the laguna of Bombon disappeared—viz, Sala, Lipa, Tanauan and Taal, with the numerous villages around them.—Manila Times.

Pasteur's Revenge.

In Vallery-Radot's "Life of Pasteur" we read the story of his misery. It is nothing to say that the war nearly broke his heart. But it broke neither his faith nor the straight line of his work. Only a sort of rage possessed him to redeem and console France by working for her. "Henceforth," he said, "every one of my books shall have written on it these words, 'Revenge, revenge, revenge.'" And this was his revenge, to set the name of France in the honors list of science higher than ever, to give the rest of his life to her service and to wear himself out for her sake.

After a Fashion.

Reporter—Senator, if I mistake not, your name has been mentioned once or twice in connection with the presidency.

Senator Lottmun—Why, yes; a London journal, I believe, once remarked that if the office of president of the United States was for sale I would probably buy it.—Chicago Tribune.

...being recognized, only a few scraps of clothing remaining. His hand was found grasping the reverse lever.

The auxiliary train arrived from Belleville about 4.15 o'clock, and, under the direction of Assistant Superintendent Coleman, of Belleville, commenced the dangerous work of clearing the line. Fortunately there was not much on the north line, and by seven o'clock the track was clear. The only obstruction on this line was the car of flour which was overturned on the track. The steam derrick was brought into use and the car was turned over a couple of times until it was clear of the rails. Owing to the fact that it was loaded with such heavy merchandise, it was torn to pieces when it was removed from the rails. The rest of the broken cars were soon removed and the track was cleared.

THE WRECK AT DAYLIGHT.

The engine on train No. 94 did not leave the track at all, although it was battered to pieces and will be good only for the scrap heap. A dead engine which was the third from the caboose of the first train, was battered a lot in the vicinity of the cab, while the tender was thrown over on its side. About four or five rods along the train, two cars were pitched into the ditch and another dead engine was turned upside down.

Bales of cotton were scattered everywhere, and flour was poured all over the tracks, as well as many bushels of wheat. The wheat and flour which covered the track, made it difficult for the wheels of the wrecking engine to get a grip on the rails. Trucks from the wrecked cars were tossed high in the air and carried around like playthings, while large iron girders were tossed off the flat car in all directions.

WHO IS TO BLAME?

The officials of the train do not know whom to hold responsible for the disaster. It is said that the two trains should not have been running so close together and that there should not have been so many dead engines on the rear-end of the first train. It is also said that Engineer Dennis should not have been running at such a high rate of speed. Engineers are not allowed to use any steam from the time they start on the down grade the other side of the Collins Bay station until they strike the up-grade about half a mile this side of the station. From all appearances it would seem that full steam had been used all the time, as indicated by the speed at which the train was running. The train officials say that if there had been a night operator at Collins Bay the accident would not have occurred as he would not have allowed the second train to go at such a speed so close behind the first train.

Collins Bay cut has long been regarded as a bad place by all trainmen who run on this division, on account of the fact that approaching trains cannot see each other until they are close together, by reason of the curves in the cut. The place where the accident occurred is the worst that could have been found along there, because high banks rise up on either side to the height of about twenty feet.

This is the third accident that has occurred in the vicinity of Collins Bay in a short time. People have not forgotten the one which occurred there last summer when a fruit train ran into another train which was stalled there for the same reason that the train could not get over the grade. It is a common thing for freight trains to be stuck there daily; in fact there are very few freight trains unless light ones which get over there without getting stuck.

The loss to the Grand Trunk will be enormous, running high up into the thousands. Two engines and part of a third are demolished and six cars are gone, besides two valuable men.

She Was Appreciative.

An author was asked by a friend whether he thought his forthcoming novel would be a success.

"That's a difficult matter to determine," was the reply. "It depends upon how it will please the public. You know writers can't always tell just how their works strike their readers. For instance, once I published a book of poems and sent copies to my friends. Shortly afterward I met a young lady who had received one, and asked her how she liked my verses. 'Oh, they were just what I wanted! Why, I couldn't sleep until I read them.'"

...Then again, the life of a good, well-made incubator properly taken care of, is such that it need hardly enter into the farmer's calculations, and the cost of furnishing it with oil for one hatching of eggs, is also very trifling so that it is safe to reckon that the time spent by the hens in doing the work of one incubator, after the farmer had furnished them with eggs would cost the equivalent of 200 chickens already hatched.

Let it be looked at from any viewpoint, and the employment of hens for hatching and brooding chicks is a miserable waste of capital and energy. The wonder is that it can be even seriously contemplated by anyone who had given the matter a moment's consideration. A decently managed incubator will hatch a far higher percentage of chicks than will the most skillful and motherly of hens, and then after the chicks are out of the shell, the simple inexpensive mechanical brooder will, with proper management, put the hen, in the matter of nothing, still more to the bad by comparison.

In considering the incubator and its bearing on poultry production, however one must take into consideration, that the use of incubator and the brooder is the inevitable outcome of thought and system in poultry raising, and this must of necessity count for much. The poultry raiser who even takes a serious view of the proposition, cannot fail to be impressed at once with the folly of permitting the hens to do the hatching and brooding. This is the beginning of the introduction into poultry raising, and it takes into its wake regulations and restrictions which mark the difference between profitable and unprofitable poultry production.

The farmer who uses an incubator will not permit his hens to run all over the place and get beyond his observation and control. He cannot permit them to do so if he wants them to spend their time in laying eggs for the incubator instead of hatching whenever they feel like it. To keep them under observation, they should be held within a walk or yard, where they will be fed and watered regularly, and where they will lay eggs in clean sanitary nests which have been carefully prepared for them with several important purposes in view.

First, they must be kept free from vermin, dirt and disease germs of all sorts and they must be so arranged that the eggs will come out of them absolutely clean and free from soilure. The nests are so arranged that the poultryman knows not only the age of his eggs, but the identity. This is an important matter for various reasons. It enabled the poultryman to know just which of his hens are good producers, and which are not, and at the same time it enables him to have the eggs gathered as fast as they are laid, thus insuring their freshness. Every farmer who has paid any attention to poultry raising knows that whether eggs are intended for hatching or for the table, it is undesirable that they should be subjected to the animal heat from the body of the hen any longer than is necessary, and that they should invariably be removed before another egg is laid in the same nest. All these precautions contribute to the market value of the eggs whether they be intended for hatching or the table. True their observance costs a little attention but everyone knows that the advantages gained, more than make up for the extra labor.

I am in the General Store business, at the above address, and have been a resident of Inkerman for thirty-seven years, and since I started this store, (four years ago) I have found your remedy the most satisfactory one I have sold. Many of my customers having used them with the most beneficial results, and I can truthfully say that I know of two particular cases, among my patrons, that have been completely cured of Dyspepsia. They had previously been treated by physicians without being cured, but I advised them to try "Fruit-a-tives", and since taking that remedy their troubles have vanished.

The use of the incubator reduces the poultry business to something more closely resembling an exact science than usually characterizes farming operations, no matter how carefully they happen to be conducted. It enables the farmer to work out experiments in breeding and mating his fowls and thus encourages and facilitates the material improvement of flock, generation after generation, by the reservation of the best producing individuals and their offspring for breeding purposes. The poultryman is enabled with accuracy to trace the breeding of his fowls and thus insure straight line breeding while making desirable family crosses of individuals within the tribal lines. It also enable him to protect his flock from the very undesirable effects of close and continued inbreeding, and this would be nearly if not quite impossible without the incubator.

In short, practically everything that makes for the intelligent and systematic production of poultry and eggs of the best types is contributed to by the employment of the incubator. It is not pretended that none have

County Council.

County Council Chambers,
Napanee, Jan. 24th, 1911.

Council met this day at 2 p.m., pursuant to Statutes, the Clerk, Mr. W. G. Wilson, presiding.

The following County Councillors, having first filed their declarations of qualifications and of office, took their seats.

Adolphustown—H. M. Johnston, Reeve.

Amherst Island—John Richards, Reeve.

Bath—G. A. Wartman, Reeve.

Camden—John W. Reid, Reeve;

W. J. Allen, Deputy Reeve.

Denbigh, A. & A.—J. E. Irish, Reeve.

Ernesttown—Clark Walker, Reeve;

R. W. Longmore, Deputy Reeve.

North Fredericksburgh—Chas. W. Hamby, Reeve.

South Fredericksburgh—Arthur B. Loyst, Reeve.

Kaladar, A. & E.—R. J. Campbell, Reeve.

Napanee—A. Alexander, Reeve.

Newburgh—M. Ryan, Reeve.

Richmond—Robt. W. Paul, Reeve.

Sheffield—Geo. Woods, Reeve.

Moved by Mr. M. Ryan, seconded by Mr. R. W. Paul, that Mr. Arthur B. Loyst, Reeve of South Fredericksburgh, be elected Warden for the year 1911.

Mr. Smith Gilmour, ex-Warden, escorted Mr. Loyst to the chair, after which Judge Madden administered the oath of declaration.

The Warden elect, Mr. Loyst, thanked the members of the Council for the honor they had conferred on him and the Municipality of South Fredericksburgh. He thought the County Road System would come up for a great deal of discussion, and hoped they would get a satisfactory solution.

The Warden called on the Ex-Wardens and Councillors present to take a seat inside the circle, which they did.

Ex-Warden, Mr. Gilmour, congratulated the Warden on the honor which had been confirmed on him and trusted that he and the Councillors would be spared this year and for many years to come.

Ex-Warden Reid congratulated the Warden, and the Councillors on the choice they had made. He noticed a great difference in the finances of the County now and that of 23 years ago when he was in the Council. He considered that he was the father of iron bridges in the County, as the first iron bridge had been put up at Colebrook when he was Warden, although opposed by a number of the Council.

Ex-Councillor Oliver congratulated the Warden and the County on the state of the finances at the present time. He was confident from looking at the faces of the Councillors for this year that they were in earnest and would do their best for the County.

Ex-Warden Hamby congratulated the Warden and felt sure he would fill the office in an able manner.

Ex-Warden Robt. W. Paul congratulated the Warden and was certain he would fill the position to the best of his ability. He saw many changes in the Council since he was Warden, which made him think he was getting old.

Treasurer Shannon was called on, and thanked the Warden and Council for the privilege of addressing them. He was glad to see the Warden elected, and so many of the Councillors re-elected, who were present last year, and thanked them for electing him Treasurer.

Councillor Ryan was called on and stated that the first year he had been forced into his present position owing to the state of affairs at Newburgh, and was pleased for the way he had been always treated in the Council. He thought they had elected the best looking man in the County Council, and in fact in the Coun-

Siberia.

"Siberia is no longer thought of as a land of desolate ice fields and barren steppes. On the other hand, it is known to be one of the most wonderful lands on earth. The rich prairies of the middle Amur and the Udaï region, where the wild vine grows freely, and the fertile black earth plains of the Tobol and the Ishim—not mere patches of rich land, but steppes covering tens of millions of acres—and vast tracts densely covered with forests predict for this far northern country a remarkable future. Its population is steadily increasing, and it is already beginning to be one of the great grain centres of the earth.

Peruna Secrets You Should Know

Golden Seal, the root of the above plant, is a very useful medicine. Many people gather it in our rich woodlands during the summer. Few people know how valuable it is in dyspepsia, catarrh, and as a general tonic.

Many thousand pounds of this root are used each year in the famous catarrh remedy, Peruna. This fact explains why everybody uses Peruna for catarrh.

Disenchanted.

It takes a neighbor to disentangle a man from a handsome setting. A good many years ago, when Wordsworth was poet laureate of England, a worthy Cumberland yeoman walked many miles, in response to widely scattered notices, to hear the poet laureate address a meeting. When he discovered who held the high sounding title he left the hall in indignation.

"'Twas nobbut old Wadsworth o' Wydal, after aw!" he said scornfully on his return to his family.

the incubator. In short, practically everything that makes for the intelligent and systematic production of poultry and eggs of the best types is contributed to by the employment of the incubator.

It is not pretended that none have failed to use the incubator with satisfactory results right from the beginning as they have made mistakes as all human beings are liable to do at times; but if every allowance be made for these failures, and for many other failures which never have been made, the balance of profit would be found overwhelmingly in favor of the incubator, as one of the most important and even essential appliances of any profit-producing poultry plant.

By the employment of the incubator, the hens on the place may be kept up to the highest possible point of productive efficiency from the beginning to the end of their career. The hatching hen is apt to be thin and badly out of condition after having brought out eight or ten chicks, and reared half the number to partial maturity, and if the greatest care is not exercised, she is liable to become infested with vermin, which if not carefully eradicated, may bring serious trouble into the whole flock. Hens with ragged coats, and with comb and gills pale and colorless, have no place in the poultry plant which is operated with incubators and along up-to-date lines. The poultryman feels that he cannot afford to have useless and inefficient fowls about the place. It will cost more to put hens which have fallen so far back, into good marketable condition than it would to produce a good, fresh and healthy pullet by the incubator route.

It appears strange that there should be any conservative feeling among Canadian Agriculturists in the matter of recognizing the value and even the necessity of the incubator on the farm to-day.

The only point that the purchaser of an incubator wants to bear in mind is that he got a machine which is built for the cold climate of the Dominion. One of the best known machines of Canadian types, is the Peerless Incubator made by the Lee Manufacturing Company of Pembroke, Ont. The advertising of this company will be found on another page of this issue.

CHARACTER IN THUMBS

A WRITER SAYS THEY ARE AN INDEX TO THE MIND.

Facts About Finger Prints and Peculiarities of the Nails.

If you believe that a person is trying to deceive you watch his thumbs. They are an unerring index to the mind asserts a writer in London Answers.

Should he be telling the truth, the thumbs will relax, and point away from the palm. In the other case, they will be invariably drawn in and hidden by the back of the hand.

The thumb is an indisputable tale-teller. It is a guide to the intelligence, and a foreteller of paralysis. Mentally weak persons, in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred, have thumbs which are undersized, characterless, and cling closely to the side of the hand. Prominent, well-developed thumbs are signs of mental and physical strength.

If there is a tendency toward paralysis in a patient, the physician notices it in the thumbs long before the disease shows itself elsewhere. An operation to avert the calamity is frequently performed on that part of the brain which is known as the

and the thumb itself is watched for any sign of favorable or other results of the operation.

The great difference the hand of an ape and a man lies in the thumb. In the human hand the thumb can be made to touch any of the fingers of the same hand. This the monkey is unable to do.

The reason why the palms of the hands and the soles of the feet are composed of cushions of fat is in order that sudden jerks and violent blows may be successfully resisted, so that no injury is done to the muscles and bones immediately beneath them.

The nails, similarly, serve as a protection to the tips of the fingers, where the highest degree of sensitiveness of touch prevails. In a person of good health the finger nail grows at the rate of about one-sixteenth of an inch a week; but during illness, or after an accident or in times of mental depression, the growth is retarded both in length and thickness.

There are many peculiar facts about the nails. Those on the right hand grow more rapidly than those on the left. Moreover, the growth varies with the length of the finger, and is fastest on the middle finger, nearly equal in the two on either side of it, and slowest on the thumb.

CHILDREN'S NAILS

grow more rapidly than adult's; while the process is slowest in the aged. In the Summer the nails of the average adult are renewed in 116 days; while in the Winter a new crop cannot grow under 132 days.

Out of every hundred lunatics and criminals, fifty have white lines across the thumb or finger nails.

Of late years much importance has been attached to the study of finger-prints. Every well-equipped Scotland detective and most of the criminal investigation officers in the local centres carry one or

HE IS A GOOD SPEAKER

KING GEORGE MORE ELOQUENT THAN HIS FATHER.

Some of His Speeches are Models of Lucidity and Happy Expression.

Although King George, like his lamented royal father, is by natural aptitude and long training a ready and eloquent speaker, he has naturally neither the time nor the knowledge necessary to prepare many of the speeches he has to deliver. Take, for example, the opening of a new wing to a hospital, for which it is necessary to give a history of the hospital and its work, to refer to the distinguished men it has given to the world and to the part it has played in advancing medical and surgical science.

These are matters which call for expert knowledge, and of which the King is naturally as ignorant as the average layman. Here the hospital authorities come gallantly to his assistance and practically prepare his speech for him. A committee of the principal officials is formed, the records of the hospital are carefully searched, and the result of the committee's work is embodied in a speech of perhaps an hour's duration. The speech, or statement, is then carefully revised and cut down to the required compass of about a quarter of an hour at the outside and invested with as much interest and literary merit as the committee can put into it.

PURPLE LETTERS ON VELLUM.

Four typewritten copies of the finished speech are then made, and, armed with these, the committee arrange a conference with the King's secretary, who makes such suggestions and amendments as he thinks advisable. The revised proof is then submitted to him Majesty, who frequently re-writes it to satisfy his individual taste, and when it has thus received the royal approval the manuscript is sent to the printers and reproduced in purple letters on vellum, in which gorgeous form it is sent to his Majesty.

In his earlier days King Edward used to learn these prepared speeches by heart; and, aided by an excellent memory, was able to deliver them with all the natural effect of impromptu utterances. On one occasion it is said—the speech was to be delivered at the Royal Academy banquet—he had omitted this precaution, and further found to his dismay that he had forgotten to take the copy with him. He proved, however, more than equal to the emergency, trying, as it was, to an inexperienced speaker, and delivered one of the best speeches of his life, to the surprise and delight of his auditors, to whom he confessed his predicament.

In later years, when experience had begotten confidence, his Majesty was content to master the facts and figures of his speech, and to trust to the inspiration of the moment for its delivery. How happy this invariably was—how natural and gracefully expressed—those who were privileged to hear him well know. "King Edward's hap-

THE CHICAGO WHEAT PIT

WHAT IT MEANS TO "CORNER" THE MARKET.

How the Brainy Speculators Devise Schemes to Raise the Price of Grain.

Every new member of the Chicago Board of Trade, in which the "Wheat Pit" is located, secretly determines to "corner" wheat, make a cool million, and swagger about as "The Wheat King." Few achieve this ambition, but to the temperamental gambler wheat offers an irresistible fascination; the prize is colossal, the excitement enthralling. The pivot of such a "corner" consists of the statistics of wheat crops, consumption, prospects, etc., gathered from America, Canada, Europe, India, Russia, the Argentine—wherever, in short, wheat is produced or consumed. Nothing of importance affecting wheat can take place without being instantly reported to the Chicago Wheat Pit, says London Answers.

GETTING THE NEWS FIRST.

There they know, before the newspapers, about any disastrous frost in Manitoba, the drought in India, the probable shortage in Russia, the contemplated import duties on wheat in France or Germany. The American Government employs highly-paid experts to collect, tabulate, analyse, and distribute information and exhaustive statistics concerning wheat. The wealthiest operators maintain secret agents at all important wheat centres to keep them constantly posted about wheat and its prospects.

One of the most conspicuous features of the Board of Trade hall is the blackboard, on which is posted the latest information about wheat from all quarters, members being specially interested in the "visible supply" at every big centre. But an ambitious "Wheat King" not only depends on this but also secures private information. All his prescience is developed in calculating the probable supply, and the demand likely to arise in each consuming country several months ahead. He then trains his speculative guns accordingly.

During a "flutter" in wheat the Pit is a perfect pandemonium; hundreds of frenzied members fight with tigerish energy to secure control of the market. Terrible battles are thus fought between the "longs," who want to force prices skyward, and the "shorts," whose interest it is to engineer a sickening "slump." Practically, they are battling against one another.

5,000 BUSHEL A FINGER!

So wild is the turmoil that it would be impossible entirely to conduct business verbally. Thus, a special finger-language is used to supplement the howling of the operators. To signify quantities, the hand is held up vertically; to denote prices, it is thrust horizontally.

Palms extended outwards mean an offer to sell; palms inward indicates a readiness to buy. For quantities, each finger means 5,000 bushels. Thus, the whole hand means 25,000 bushels; four fingers,

STRANGE RUNS OF LUCK

ONE OF THE LATEST "WINS" AT MONTE CARLO.

Mr. W. Darnbrough, an Englishman, Said to Have Made $320,000 in a Month.

Now and again one hears authentic instances of large sums having been won at the gaming tables at Monte Carlo.

One of the most fortunate players at Monte Carlo for a considerable time past has been Mr. W. Darnbrough, whose exploits figured in the newspapers a few weeks ago.

A FORTUNE IN A MONTH.

According to one of the London dailies, he left with $320,000 in his pockets, as the result of a month's stay and play. But this did not represent all Mr. Darnbrough's winnings.

To go a little into details, on the opening day of his play he staked $8,000, and won all along the line. Emboldened by this success, he continued playing, winning again and again with marvellous luck.

At one period his credit balance amounted to no less than $465,000, but from this point Dame Fortune ceased to smile upon him. He steadily lost from $60,000 to $80,000 per day, until, recognizing that luck had turned against him, he had sufficient strength of mind to turn his back on the tables and strike for home with the very substantial winnings that still remained.

On another occasion a certain well-known member of the London Stock Exchange was said to have walked off from Monte Carlo with little short of $200,000. This remarkable performance occasioned no small amount of excitement in the rooms, as such an unusual incident invariably does.

Bent on embarking in more or less of a "plunge," he went from one table to another, placing the maximum on the same number. Marvellous to relate, at each table this number came up.

MAN WHO BROKE THE BANK.

Recognizing that this might be his lucky day, the fortunate player wended his way to the gaming room and put the maximum on three of the tables there. To his amazement he found that at each he had selected the right color.

According to one of the head croupiers, this was the worst day that the rooms had had for some time. He gave it as his opinion, too, that what the London stockbroker had netted by his spirited play was little less than the amount above mentioned.

One of the most successful players at the Monte Carlo tables was Wells, who, according to the once popular music-hall song, "broke the bank" there. He was at the zenith of his fame about twenty years ago, when his doings—and winnings—were widely talked about and envied.

In ten days he was said to have made upwards of $200,000 at the tables after starting with so modest a capital as $2,000. It must not be forgotten, however, that Wells denied this at his trial, stating that all he made was $35,000 across the thumb or finger nails.

Of late years much importance has been attached to the study of finger-prints. Every well-equipped Scotland detective and most of the criminal investigation officers in the local centres carry one or more magnifying glasses, in readiness for examination of the accusing finger-print.

The different patterns formed by the fine ridges and hollows on the finger tips are divided into four main groups—the arch, the whorl, the loop, and the composite variety. Of these by far the commonest is the loop, which occurs on sixty finger tips out of a hundred.

Finger prints never change. The pattern is just the same in old age as in infancy.

Has Cup of Coffee and Rolls Before Seven.

King George, since he came to the throne, has surprised those about him with the rapidity with which he works and the quickness with which he can make himself the master of any document or state paper that is put in front of him. The late King was deliberate in his methods, and liked to consider every point with the greatest care. The present King, on the other hand, takes everything at top speed, but there is nothing that misses his eye. He is naturally a rapid thinker, and possesses a wonderfully retentive memory.

He is a very early riser, and, whether he is staying at York Cottage, Windsor Castle, or Buckingham Palace, his cup of coffee and roll and butter are taken to his room a little before seven. By eight o'clock he is seated at his desk, and is going through the papers that have accumulated from the previous day. He reads carefully every letter that reaches him, no matter how humble the source; and when he has finished it he pencils a few instructions upon it and places it in one of the red morocco leather despatch-boxes that stand in front of him.

There are many papers, of course, that cannot be dealt with by the King in a moment or two, and these are placed on one side for more careful consideration. Between ten and eleven in the forenoon communications from the Prime Minister and the heads of the various government departments reach the King, and by this time his two most trusted advisers, Lord Knollys and Sir Arthur Biggs are at his elbow ready to advise him. It is stated about the court that among the last words of the late King to his son on his death-bed were, "Trust Knollys," and to this King George has steadily adhered. He does not maintain that regular and voluminous correspondence with the heads of foreign Powers that King Edward did during his reign, but his letter-bag, day by day, is of very considerable dimensions.

Practically the whole of the King's work is done in the morning, and he contrives to keep his afternoon free for recreation of one form or another. The evening, however, finds him back at work again, glancing through the matters that have been submitted for his consideration during the day, as he likes to have everything clear before he retires for the night.

facts and figures of his speech, and to trust to the inspiration of the moment for its delivery. How happy this invariably was—how natural and gracefully expressed—those who were privileged to hear him well know. "King Edward's happiest efforts, however," Lord Rosebery says, "were those which were quite innocent of any preparation. In grace and simplicity of language, delicacy of humor and dignity of utterance, the King's impromptu speaking might well challenge comparison with that of any after dinner speaker I have ever heard."

On many subjects, too King Edward was an expert who needed no help in preparing his speeches; and many of his best efforts, on such wide-apart subjects as art and agriculture, were entirely of his own production; and, like all his speeches, gained considerably from his clear enunciation and his beautiful, well-modulated voice.

KING IS A BORN SPEAKER.

King George is, if possible, an even better speaker than his royal father. Indeed, some of his speeches are perfect models of lucidity, happy expression and natural eloquence. Although the material for many of them is supplied on lines similar to those described above, he has long passed the stage when he has to rely on his memory. A perfect master of his facts, he is able to clothe them in words which, by their happy choice and smooth flow, proclaim the born speaker. Indeed, in perfection of expression, many of them are well entitled to rank with the finest examples of English oratory.

REMEDIES FOR SEA-SICKNESS

English Princess Royal Had to Endure Some Odd Ones.

Perhaps the most curious remedy for seasickness ever prescribed was that arranged by Sir Theodore Mayern for the English Princess Royal when she crossed to Belgium in 1642. Cinnamon, coriander, anise, ambergris, musk and sugar were to be made up into long tubes for her to munch on the voyage; a plaster of balsam of Peru, gum mastic and laudanum was to be applied to the pit of the stomach and, in addition, she was to inhale the comforting vapors arising from a hash of toast, orange and citron peel, roses, lavender and cloves, mingled with wine, cinnamon water and elderflower vinegar.

There was a time when it was believed possible to prevent seasickness by means of specially constructed vessels. The Calais-Dover, a twin ship, was used on the channel service for many years. Great things were expected from this, but she proved a slow boat, and her passengers were by no means immune from seasickness.

Another attempt in this direction was the Castala, in which the saloon was suspended like a hammock with a view to minimizing the pitching and rolling. This turned out an utter failure. If the rolling was less than in ordinary vessels the pitching was quite as bad, and, moreover, the swinging mechanism occasionally stuck.

Try a man with trifles before trusting him with treasures.

note prices, it is almost horriably. Palms extended outward mean an offer to sell; palms inward indicates a readiness to buy. For quantities, each finger means 5,000 bushels. Thus, the whole hand means 25,000 bushels; four fingers, 20,000 bushels; and so on. Suppose wheat is selling at 80 3-4, and an operator wishes to sell 25,000 bushels, he raises one hand above his head, with the palms extended outwards, and bellows, "Six-eighths; three-quarters!"—meaning 80 3-4, the 80 being understood. The various differences in the cents are indicated by clenching the fist or closing the fingers in a certain manner.

Let us suppose that Cyrus K. Bloggs buys from Hiram Z. Quirkle 1,000,000 bushels of wheat for May delivery at 60 cents per bushel. Quirkle jubilates at the pile of money he is going to make out of Bloggs by astute market manipulations against him. Bloggs also "gets busy," so manoeuvring that before the end of May, when the "deal" has to be consummated, the price of wheat shall have shot up to say 120 cents per bushel.

This would mean a difference of 62 cents on every bushel bought, or $625,000 on the total. When the fatal day arrives, and wheat touches 120 cents, Quirkle must either deliver, or pay Bloggs $625,000. He will probably "cash up," smile grimly, and mentally swear to catch his victorious enemy next season. For wheat is not easy to deliver in such circumstances.

Far from the roar of Chicago city, seated in a luxurious office perched on the top of a skyscraper, sits the "Wheat King," surrounded by telephones, "tickers" to record the delirious fluctuations of wheat minute by minute, samples of wheat of every description, a maze of cablegrams, reports and statistics. A big army of clerks performs the intricate detail work, all of which is cleverly combined and controlled by the master brain.

WHEAT ON THE BRAIN.

For instance, Mr. Patten's last year's successful "corner," by which he made $2,000,000, represented twelve months' steady work and countless calculations. He had to watch the market as a cat watches a mouse; to "keep track" of what his enemies were doing in various markets; to enthrone his own supporters, always liable to get into a mortal "funk" if they see prices drooping. It was a great mental and physical strain, only possible to a man of iron nerve and robust constitution. The "Wheat King" gets wheat on the brain, sees it everywhere; dreams of it by night. Wheat! wheat! wheat! sings in his head. Lucky if he escapes mental collapse!

NOT AMBITIOUS.

"If you want to be strong and healthy, Millie," advised Aunt Jemima, "eat a raw onion every morning before breakfast."

"I'd rather not do that, auntie," said Miss Millicent; "I shall be satisfied with being merely healthy."

It sometimes happens that a man is offered a bribe and pockets the insult.

and envied. In ten days he was said to have made upwards of $200,000 at the tables after starting with so modest a capital as $2,000. It must not be forgotten, however, that Wells denied this at his trial, stating that all he made was $35,000 at three or four consecutive sittings. Even then he claimed to have in the end run out a loser.

The reader can take his choice of the two statements; but amongst frequenters of the rooms at Monte Carlo it is generally considered impossible to amass large winnings without risking large stakes. Even then the chances are a thousand to one in favor of the bank.

Yet there undoubtedly are occasionally wins running into four or five figures.

CLOTHES MADE FROM WOOD.

Will Bring Reduction in Price of Various Articles.

Clothes made literally from wood are the latest sartorial venture in England. A beginning is being made with the making of waistcoats. The discovery of this new process is largely due to the fact that bleached cotton is known to be composed of nearly pure cellulose. Working on this basis scientists have discovered a method of manufacturing a thread of cellulose extracted from spruce wood.

Cotton spinners are optimistic about the discovery, it is asserted, and with the material manufactured from this latest process they expect to produce clothing at prices lower than those now charged. The finest product will, it is said, be cheaper than cotton in the bale.

In addition to this cardinal advantage the new material can be dyed any color and—an important point—the dye will not fade. Lastly, the material is not inflammable.

"This new process should bring the best up to date attire within the reach of almost all," says an expert on clothing matters. "Also since waistcoats are to be manufactured of this cellulose thread extracted from spruce wood, I can see no reason why all the rest of one's suit should not be made from a similar material. In fact, the discovery should revolutionize the price of all cotton goods."

GLASS VS. GRANITE.

Has Resistance of 1,800 Tons Per Square Foot.

Glass put to the crushing test is harder than granite. It has a resistance of 1,800 tons per square foot, while that of granite is 750 tons, limestone 625 tons, brickwork 60 tons, and concrete 97 tons. In view of these figures it is surprising that glass has not before entered into serious competition with the other building materials. Glass bricks are being introduced for a number of purposes, and they are recommended for their strength and hardness of surface, which is a guarantee against chipping and cracking, and entirely sanitary under all conditions. The glass brick consists of a shell with two flat surfaces which form the exposed portions when in place, and after being laid, wet cement is poured into the open ends so the bricks are bound together in a solid mass upon the hardening of the concrete.

HOW THE ROYAL GEORGE FILLED AND SANK.

The Disaster Which Occurred to the Namesake of the New Battleship.

The fact that one of the new battleships is to be named the "Royal George" reminds one of that former "Royal George" and the disaster which occurred to her, well known by reason of Cowper's poem, "Toll for the brave." The story of the terrible calamity will probably interest readers.

In 1782 Britain was in a more humbled state than she had been for a century. The wars with America, and France, Spain and Holland, had exhausted her resources, and there was seen the unusual spectacle of a French fleet menacing the coasts. It was at this period that a calamity occurred which resulted in the loss of the

FIRST SHIP IN THE NAVY.

At Portsmouth a fleet was being prepared for the relief of Gibraltar, then besieged by Spain, and one of the ships destined for this expedition was the "Royal George" of 108 guns. She was the oldest first rate class in the service, having been laid down in 1751. Lord Anson, Lord Rodney, and Admiral Boscawen had commanded in her often, and Lord Hawke commanded in her the squadron which fought the French under Conflans. Before she could sail it was deemed necessary that the "Royal George" should undergo a careening—that is, an inspection and repair of those parts under water. If time had not pressed she would have been towed into dock for this purpose. As the case was, it was resolved that she should be land over on her side, as usual when a slight careening was required, in calm weather and smooth water. So little was any difficulty or danger apprehended that the Admiral, Captain, officers and crew, amounting to about 900, remained on board, and in addition there were about 300 women and children, relations of the seamen. Neither guns, provisions, nor water were removed.

THE CATASTROPHE.

Early in the morning of Aug. 29 the work was begun. The ship was made to incline in the water so as to expose her lower timbers, but as a leak was discovered it was necessary to heel her over still further, in order to get at it. About ten o'clock a.m., while Admiral Kempenfelt was in his cabin writing, and the larger number of the people were between decks, a sudden squall threw the ship clean over on her side, and as her portholes were open she filled and sank at once. The Admiral, several officers, and, in fact, about a thousand people were drowned altogether, some three hundred being saved, among them being Captain Waghorne. The calamity was universally lamented, not so much for the ship as for the number of lives lost, more especially Kempenfelt, as he was one of the first naval officers of the world. A large sum of money was publicly subscribed for the relief of the families and relatives of

PUNISHMENT OF ALIEN CRIMINALS DISCUSSED.

Plan to Arm British Police With Revolvers Meets with Bitter Opposition.

How to get rid of anarchists in London, how to prevent their landing in England and how to punish them when caught offending are questions being more widely discussed than ever since the police discovered an anarchist arsenal in Gold street, London, in connection with the Houndsditch murders. The discovery only lends additional color to the suspicion widely prevalent of late that London has been seriously menaced by an organized conspiracy of a desperate character, writes a London correspondent.

UNDESIRABLES POUR IN.

The number of alien criminals who habitually make London their home have had their already considerable forces so heavily re-inforced during the last twelve months or so that an organized outbreak has not been entirely unexpected. The door to English hospitality has been taken full advantage of during the last year or so by the foreign criminal, the "undesirables" of Europe simply "pouring in."

At the time of King Edward's death an organized descent was made upon England by an invading army of the worst criminals of Europe, attracted by the vast course of persons they knew would attend his majesty's funeral. They attended the funeral themselves, and a large percentage of them have remained in London ever since. Last summer bands of these desperadoes visited the English race courses. It was remarked on all sides that never before had so large a number of foreigners been present at race meetings.

ALWAYS CARRY REVOLVERS.

Houndsditch and Soho are said to be honeycombed with these living dangers to society. These are the creatures whom the unarmed police have to fear, who, when brought to bay, have no hesitation in opening fire with the revolvers they always carry.

One of the questions which is being seriously discussed is how to punish foreigners who are found carrying revolvers without cause, and the revival of flogging seems to be the most generally favored. Mr. Plowden, the Marylebone police magistrate; Sir Robert Anderson, formerly head of the criminal investigation department, and Dr. R. F. Quinton, one time governor of Holloway prison, all of whom have had wide experience in dealing with the criminal classes, are equally in favor of corporal punishment as a crime deterrent.

ITALIAN ASTONISHES PRENON WAR OFFICE.

Pocket Wireless Machine, Telegraph Printer, and a Teleautograph.

Prof. Cerebotani, an Italian inventor, gave a private exhibit of his astonishing wireless discoveries the other day in Paris before members of the Ministries of War, Posts and Telegraphs, and a large number of scientists, including M. Eiffel, the constructor of the Eiffel Tower, which is now a Government station. Among the apparatus employed was a pocket wireless machine, a wireless telegraph printer by means of which messages are sent as readily as written on a typewriter, and a wireless teleautograph which enables persons to sign their signatures as far as wireless waves reach.

THE POCKET APPARATUS

is a little larger than a pair of field glasses and is operated by attaching its antennae to a post or tree, which, at the height of fifty feet enables communication to be made within a radius of two or three miles. The teleprinter, a local contemporary explains, is a simple little instrument with a keyboard like a typewriter, which can be fixed to any telegraph or telephone installation. This transmits messages which appear on printed slips at the other end, but it has the advantage of being infinitely more simple than anything yet invented, and, besides, can be used with wireless. This should be interesting to railway officials in particular, since such a machine could be put at the disposal of all signalmen, pointsmen, station-masters and others, permitting them to communicate quickly and accurately with the head office. It would also be exceedingly useful for small, out-of-the-way Post Offices, since no special training or practice is necessary to operate it.

SIMPLE APPARATUS.

The teleautograph is a most simple apparatus, which can also be affixed to any telephone or telegraph line. By this a signature, a drawing, or a holograph manuscript written with a pencil fixed to a flexible carriage is copied exactly on a machine at the other end. Hence a man in Paris could sign a document in Algiers, or a signature in Algiers could be verified from Paris. As if these wonders were not already sufficient, we are further assured that the greater the distance the better the machine will work, although we have not been told why this should be so. The tracing of one's signature seems to be no more difficult than with a pen, and a pencil repeats it automatically wherever we want it, even should it be at the Antipodes.

MESSAGE FOR SOLAR PLEXUS

New Rule of Health is Given by British Authority.

One of the secrets of long life lies in the way in which you treat your solar plexus, according to Robert King, who lectured on the subject recently at the Eustace Miles Normal Physical School, London, England. Massage your solar plexus, is his new rule of health. For the sake of those who might be unacquainted with physiology, Mr. King explained that the solar plexus is the great subbrain of the human body—a mass of nerve substance lying between the stomach and spine, whose function it is to control such unconscious operations as respiration, circulation and digestion.

The special significance of the solar plexus lies in its extreme susceptibility to emotion. Boxers, of course, know that it is very susceptible to something else.

"So soon as the emotion of fear is felt," is Mr. King's theory, "the solar plexus begins to shut up, its capacity for passing on the vital forces becomes limited, and the whole of the nervous system drops. With the emotion of joy or pleasure, the solar plexus expands. When a person is thoroughly enjoying a good laugh it is expanded almost to its utmost capacity, with the result that the whole nerve tone of the body goes up."

It is impossible to apply the massage with the hands, Mr. King explained, but nature has provided a far more efficient instrument in the diaphragm—the great muscle that separates the chest from the abdomen. By deep-breathing the diaphragm receives a gentle motion which causes it to rub and press upon the plexus, which, in turn, energizes the entire body.

"Learn to breathe properly," is the sum and substance of Dr. King's doctrine.

CITY WITHIN CITY.

Little Town is Shut in by Gates Called the Fuggerel.

Rev. J. F. Dickie, pastor of the American church in Berlin, when in Augsburg, Germany, a few weeks ago, found a little city in the heart of the city, that was shut in all by itself with two gates, and is called the "Fuggerel." It is so called because the one hundred and six houses within it were all built with money left by Fugger, the wealthy sixteenth century banker, who has been called the J. P. Morgan of the country. When he died, he directed that these houses should be built and then given to poor aged families for four marks and twelve pfennings rental a year, that is, exactly one American dollar. They have four rooms and kitchen, with a little front garden and a little garden behind.—The Christian Herald.

Despite the astounding battle of Mile End, in which two burglar archists, armed with automatic pistols, held 1,500 policemen, two detachments of the Scots Guards and a battalion of firemen at bay for nine hours, in face of the tragedy of Houndsditch, when burglar confederates of the Mile End desperadoes killed three policemen, and notwithstanding the fact that the London newspapers have been telling how men of the constabulary have been shot at by alien criminals, and recounting murder mysteries like that of Clapham Common, the English public, represented by criminologists, officials and persons who are filling the newspapers with letters, are opposed to the proposal that the police shall be armed.

ATTACKS MADE ON POLICE.

Astonishing as it may seem to Canadians, it is true that a certain section of the press has seized upon the "battle of Mile End" as a pretext for an attack upon the police and the government vigorously supporting the contention that a London "bobby" armed with a truncheon should be able to conquer the whole criminal world.

Just as a sample of what is being said about the extraordinary affair, an interview with Dr. Forbes Winslow, who is quoted as "having made a life study of matters connected with the criminal classes," should furnish food for thought by Canadian policemen and the public in general.

EXPERT HAS BRIGHT IDEA.

This expert criminologist after stating that in his opinion the police could have captured the desperadoes without a struggle if they had thought the matter out well before hand, goes on to say:

"When they were in the house getting hold of the woman, Gershon, they could have lighted a charcoal fire that would have speedily settled the aliens' resistance. If the men had attempted to interfere with the fire before its fumes had had time to render them unconscious they would have had to come down to the police to do so.

"There have been so many cases of shooting and of mysteries, that have baffled the authorities just lately that the police have got a bad attack of hysteria."

HIGHEST TOWN IN THE WORLD

Cerro de Pasco, Peru, Has Elevation of 14,600 Feet.

Cerro de Pasco, Peru, is the highest town in the world. The remarkable broad-gauge railway by which it is reached passes over a higher altitude—about that of Mont Blanc—and there are mining camps and Indian villages at greater elevations. It is also true that there are higher railway stations, for on the Arica-Puno line the station of Crucero Alto attains the stupendous elevation of 4,600 feet; but at 14,200 feet above the sea level there is no other real town of 8,000 inhabitants with a railway station, telegraph, telephone, churches, shops, clubs, hospitals and vice consuls. It is a wonderful example of South American enterprise.

To get a fair view of Cerro de Pasco it is necessary to go to the top of a high rock near the railway station. The town, with its little, thatched houses and narrow streets, lies in a large, undulating basin. It is a mining town. In the distance a large lake can be seen, and all around the horizon is studied with snow-capped heights.

Everything at Cerro de Pasco is "run" by the Americans. There is a spacious club, where bowls are played nightly, and in the hollow below there are baseball grounds. Both these games are characteristically American; they are played at high pressure the whole time. The biggest match can be played in about 1½ hours, and the players are near enough to the spectators to hear the comments, encouraging or otherwise, that are liberally bestowed.

Another invention of the professor is an instrument for preserving the secrecy of wireless messages. As is well known, a message sent out by a wireless station is received by all stations within a certain radius, although it be intended for one of them, because the Hertzian waves sent out affect all receivers alike. This new machine, however, allows each of a large number of stations to have its identification number, and when the Hertzian waves are set going with the transmitter at a certain number, only the station bearing the corresponding number can receive the messages, all the others being cut off by a short circuit arrangement.

FRUIT IN JAPAN.

Very Little Formerly Grown, but Now It is Even Exported.

The use of fruits in Japan was until recently limited to the upper classes, and the cultivation of fruit trees was not carried on as at the present day, though fruits growing wild in field or forest were gathered and offered for sale. A few fruit trees were grown by householders in their home gardens for private use, but little attention was paid to their cultivation.

The principal cause for the slow development of fruit culture in Japan appears to have been the climate. The climate being warm and moist, there is luxuriant growth of vegetation, producing the exquisitely beautiful landscapes for which Japan is so well known, but on the other hand few advantages for fruit culture exist. In order to obtain satisfactory results, great expenditure is necessary.

Fruits which have been cultivated from ancient days extensively enough to be grown in orchards or vineyards, says the Japan Magazine, are oranges, pears, plums and grapes, and great attention was paid to the different varieties of each, though the plum was chiefly cultivated and prized for its blossom and large plum gardens abound in Japan, valued for their beauty and attractiveness during their flowering season, which is in snowy January.

Such trees as the persimmon, peach, loquat, quince, Japanese apricot and plum, jujube and ginnan are often planted around the home or along the footpaths in rice fields, but these are for the most part seedlings and no special attention is paid to them, except occasional fertilizing. Formerly there was no uniform and methodical system for fruit culture in Japan except for pears, oranges and grapes, but since 1877, when foreign fruit trees were first introduced, the method of culture according to scientific principles has been advocated.

The amount and value of oranges, peaches, plums, persimmons, pears and grapes produced in 1907-8 reached a surprisingly high figure, and large quantities were shipped to the United States, Canada, China and Vladivostok. Pears, sand pears, oranges, apples, date plums, loquats, quinces, pomogranates, peaches, apricots (Japanese and foreign), plums, jujube, sweet cherries, grapes, figs and gooseberries, and walnuts and chestnuts are the fruits and nuts mostly appreciated and eaten in Japan, the latter being wild with only a few examples of the cultivated variety.

FIRES CAUSED BY RAILWAYS

Questions Discussed at the Forestry Association Meeting in Quebec.

A despatch from Quebec says: Hon. Clifford Sifton delivered an excellent address at the recent session of the Forestry Association. He chose for this subject the question of "Forestry Problems and Forest Fires." At the outset he pointed out the early difficulties which beset the pioneers in forestry work. Despite the indifference on the part of the public, Mr. Sifton contended that no movement in modern times had made such genuine progress as the conservation of our forests. He told of the early struggles he had to obtain a vote of $15,000 for the establishment of a forestry school in connection with the Department of the Interior. Since the establishment of that school no less than 15,000,000 trees had been planted in the western provinces.

In connection with forest fires, Mr. Sifton showed that the railroads were the chief offenders. From careful investigation it was found that out of 171 fires in Quebec last year the railroads caused 75. In Ontario the railroads started 404 out of 432 fires, which took place in the Province. In the west the proportion was smaller, but even there it was shown that they were the chief offenders, causing 186 out of 1,226 fires. "We want them penalized for the fires they cause, and if this is done it will tend to make campers and settlers more careful," said Mr. Sifton. In conclusion he asked for the support of the convention in connection with the efforts being made by the Conservation Commission to penalize the railroads for the fires they cause.

Mr. Hall, Secretary of the Society for the Protection of the Adirondacks, told of their fight to secure freedom from forest fires. They had found after careful investigation, that the railroads were the chief offenders, and had passed laws compelling them to burn oil in their locomotives while passing through the forests. This policy, together with the cleaning up of the right of way and the establishment of watch towers, had made the Adirondacks practically free from fires.

Mr. R. D. Campbell, Dominion Superintendent of Forestry, gave an exhaustive report on the work carried on by his department. He pointed out the difficulty of properly patrolling large areas of forest, of getting trained fire-rangers, and of the need of educative work among the settlers. He concluded that a fire patrol was needed along the lines of railroad, no matter what other means of protection were adopted.

Fashion Hints

NOTES FROM PARIS SHOPS.

Long coats of watered moire silk are made in Paris tight fitting, enveloping the wearer from head to foot.

Heavy thread and metal laces are pretty features of the winter hats designed to wear with dressy clothes.

For evening wear gold or silver tulle turbans are seen with tall aigrettes or groups of marabout feathers.

Ecrusse levant is the name given to that fine grain leather of high finish that is so popular for purses and bags.

There is nothing prettier or smarter than white fox for collars of evening wraps, especially for young women.

Chains are no longer in evidence for the black velvet bags; all have long silk cords by which to swing them from the arm.

Huge sailor or round collars of fur or fancy fabrics mark the 1911 evening coat, and bands of fur are at the foot of many.

Fine threads, fine dots, fine meshes and a general delicacy of structure and design are predominating features of the new veils.

New slippers from Paris are of satin, richly embroidered with gold and silver bullion—gold upon white satin and silver upon black satin.

Marabout feathers are much used, and as the latest novelty, cocks' feathers dyed to match the primary colors of the gown have arrived.

New scarfs already planned to replace fur stoles are of soft, thin breitschwantz, lined with old cachemire silk; about the neck the edge turns over a little to show the lining.

Wide braids are used in perpendicular bands and panels and in circular rows on skirts and in fancy sections here and there on both coats and skirts and for cuffs and collars on coats.

Paris has a sensation in the launching of the trouser skirt, a daring idea, but not so daring in appearance, as it is reported to rather closely resemble the well known divided riding skirt.

Many buttons, braid covered, covered with bits of embroidery, fur, tapestry, Persian fabrics, satin, and silk are used in connection with braids, of which buckles and slides are also made.

The most effective afternoon dresses are those of black mousseline over silk or satin in oriental design, most of them having a deep hem of velvet. There are no touches of white on these dresses. The guimpes are of black lace or tucked chiffon.

FOUR BURNED TO DEATH.

Mrs. Percy C. Brooks and Her Three Children, of Toronto.

A despatch from Toronto says: A fire that partially destroyed the frame house, 425 Indian Road, at an early hour on Saturday morning was responsible for four deaths in the family of Mr. Brooks. The fire apparently started near the fur-

BUNG FORCED OUT.

Liquor in Barrels of Frozen Water Seized in New Ontario.

A despatch from Cobalt says: Chief of Police Coldbeck returned on Wednesday afternoon from Kelson, where Constable Lefebvre seized sixty cases of liquors being shipped into the gold country. A very ingenious method was used for concealing part of the shipment, consisting of five cases. The bottles were packed in straw in barrels, which were filled with water. This was allowed to freeze, the barrel head was replaced and the whole painted over. Lefebvre discovered the goods because the bung of a barrel was forced out by the freezing of the water. This was con-

4,000 ACRES OF FLAX.

Big Alberta Land Company Preparing to Farm Its Holding.

A despatch from Calgary says: A. Briggs, who in company with associates, purchased twenty sections, 13,000 acres of non-irrigable land, within the irrigation block, south of Kininzie, last summer, announces that he has now organized the Boston-Alberta Development Company, and that they propose to put 4,000 acres in flax this spring, breaking the land with traction plows. It is the intention of his company to put the greater part of the entire area in wheat, as soon as possible.

Lefebvre discovered the goods because the bung of a barrel was forced out by the freezing of the water. This was consigned from Toronto to the East Whitney Mining Company. The balance was packed in cases and addressed to fictitious names in small lots. Samuel Morgan, of Cobalt, was summoned to explain the matter, as he was said to be endeavoring to get the shipment through.

SHIPS AT SEA IN DARKNESS.

Can Instantly Reverse Engines Running at Full Speed.

A despatch from Pittsburg says: George Westinghouse has completed an invention by which, it is claimed, the danger to ships at sea in fogs or darkness will be greatly minimized. Through the invention the watchman can by a simple turn of the wrist in case of emergency, reverse all engines though running at full speed and set them racing backwards. The invention is designed specially for use in vessels equipped with turbine engines, as is the case almost exclusively in shipbuilding now. A small lever within easy reach of the man in charge on shipboard will be the only evidence in view of his increased power. It is estimated at the Westinghouse shops, where the invention has been completed, that it will prove a great preventive of loss of life or damage to property.

WARSHIPS FOR UNCLE SAM.

Will Build Two of the Biggest in the World.

A despatch from Washington says: The United States may possess the two biggest battleships in the world if Congress enacts into law an amendment incorporated into the Naval Bill Friday. The naval building programme involves a total expenditure of $36,000,000. Of this amount, $12,800,000 is made available for two battleships "of not less than 27,000 tons each." According to the information received by the Naval Committee, it is the purpose of the Secretary of the Navy under this authorization to let contracts for two battleships of approximately 20,000 tons each.

500 MILES OF NEW TRACK

Canadian Pacific Railway Plans Many New Lines in the West.

A despatch from Montreal says: It was stated on Wednesday evening by Vice-President William Whyte of the C. P. R. that the company will build 500 miles of track in the west during the coming summer, including the completion of the double-tracking of the line between Winnipeg and Brandon. In addition to this there will be a good deal of double-tracking around Moose Jaw, which is becoming an important shipping centre. In order to make the road through the spring, breaking the land with traction plows. It is the intention of his company to put the greater part of the entire area in wheat, as soon as possible.

DEATH FOR PLOTTERS.

Conspired Against Lives of Japanese Imperial Family.

A despatch from Tokio says: Dr. D. Kotoku, his alleged wife, and twenty-two other persons have been sentenced to death for conspiring against the lives of the Imperial family. Two other men who were associated with them have received sentences of eight and eleven years apiece, with hard labor, for concealing explosives.

FIGHTING IN HANKOW.

Native Chinese Thought British Police Murdered a Coolie.

A despatch from Hankow, China, says: The death of a coolie, who was found in a state of collapse by the British police, resulted in serious disorders on Sunday. The Chinese suspected that the police had killed the coolie and rioting began in several sections of the city. British and German gunboats landed detachments and fierce fighting followed, in which eight Chinese were killed. The Viceroy is sending native troops to restore order.

KING TO VISIT IRELAND.

With Queen Will Hold Series of Functions This Summer.

A despatch from Dublin says: It is reported here that King George and Queen Mary will make a brief visit to Ireland, probably in July or August. They will reside in the vice-regal lodge and will hold a series of brilliant State functions.

CURES PARALYSIS.

Austrian Physician Claims Success With Tuberculin.

A despatch from Vienna says: After three years' experimentation, Prof. Wagner von Jauregg, of the University of Vienna, claims to have cured 23 per cent. of cases of progressive paralysis out of 1,500 patients by injections of Koch's tuberculin. The disease heretofore has been considered incurable.

Sheep brought from 4½c to 4½c, and lambs from 6c to 6½c per pound. The demand for calves was good, and sales were made at 4c to 7c per pound. Hogs unchanged.

Toronto, Jan. 24.—Hogs sold on the basis of $7.25 to $7.35 f.o.b. country, while sheep, lambs and all other commodities were steady and unchanged.

Trade returns for the last nine months show an increase of $68,000,000 in imports and about $500,000 in exports.

Mr. Stephen H. Penfold, who lived alone near Tapleystown, was found dead in bed by neighbors who broke into his house.

A despatch from Toronto says: A fire that partially destroyed the frame house, 425 Indian Road, at an early hour on Saturday morning was responsible for four deaths in the family of Mr. Brooks. The fire apparently started near the furnace and worked its way into the upper part of the house, cutting off all escape for the family. The maid jumped from a rear window and escaped. Mr. Brooks, Manager and Treasurer of the Fairbanks-Morris Manufacturing Company, is in Chicago on business. He was telegraphed to by neighbors immediately on the tragedy becoming known.

LEAPED FROM CABOOSE.

Trainmen Hurt in Escaping From Burning Caboose.

A despatch from Portage La Prairie, Man., says: Conductor Howe and Brakesman John Alexander and Frank Moore, of the C. P. R., are in the hospital here, though not seriously hurt. The cause of the trouble was the explosion of a lamp, which set fire to a car, when the train was five miles west of this city. They were unable to open the door, but broke the window and leaped out into the snow.

ONTARIO LIVE STOCK SHOW.

Results of the Year's Seed Grain Competitions.

A despatch from Ottawa says: The feature of Thursday at the Ontario Live Stock Show was the announcement of results in the year's seed grain competitions. The prize winners were: Oats, Wm. ## HEALTH

DIATHESIS.

The word diathesis in medicine means "a constitutional predisposition." Certain individuals, or often certain entire families, may be confidently expected to react physically in one way, while other individuals or groups of individuals will react in another way. This is why doctors are interested in the family history of their patients. By finding out what sort of material people's tissues are made of, the doctors are able to judge what sort of physical strain the patients will prove most susceptible to.

Some people are physically "all wool and a yard wide"; others should be marked "handle with care—this end up." It is when the stress of life comes that these differences in the texture of people, so to speak, become most apparent, and it is the common, simple every-day ailments to which all are subject that try people out, and grade them according to their physical class.

One schoolboy will stub his toe, grumble a minute, and that is the end of it. The next boy will meet with the same accident, and must stay at home for a week and have his toe poulticed. The first boy has inherited sound tissues. He can afford risks that the second boy must avoid if possible. Nature has insured him for a higher sum.

The so-called strumous diathesis, or tuberculous tendency, is always bad soil for all ailments, even though tuberculosis may never actually develop in it. Its subjects will show a susceptibility to various ailments, such as pleurisy, repeated attacks of influenza, or bronchial weakness—they are constantly reminded that a foe waits at the gates of life.

It would be hard to enumerate the many ills that are now traced to the gouty diathesis. Among them may be mentioned tonsillitis, asthma, and many forms of skin trouble, such as outbreaks of herpes, or eczema. Many people who are of the gouty or arthritic type will suffer from repeated attacks of tonsillitis, or herpes, or hay-fever while young, and become the victims of genuine gout in middle life. Another constitutional predisposition is the neurotic or nervous

THE HUDSON BAY RAILWAY

G.T.R. Willing to Negotiate With Government Regarding Operation of Line.

A despatch from Ottawa says: A telegram was received on Wednesday by the Hon. Geo. P. Graham, Minister of Railways and Canals, from Charles M. Hays, President of the G.T.R. Company, making an offer from the G.T.R. to negotiate with the Government respecting the operation of the Hudson Bay Railway. While no terms were mentioned, it is surmised that the Grand Trunk Pacific would desire a lease similar to the one under which it will operate the eastern section of the National Transcontinental. A substantially similar offer it is said, has already been received from the Canadian Northern, and it is hoped that better terms may be received from one of the other companies. The present proposition contemplates the construction of a line from the Grand Trunk Pacific from Saskatoon to the Pas Mission. This proposition follows on a conference held here recently in which President Hays, Mr. Wainwright and Chief Engineer Kelliher participated.

CANNED CHINESE EGGS

Seventy-Five Thousand Dollars' Worth Seized at Montreal.

A despatch from Montreal says: A consignment of canned eggs from China, valued at $75,000, has been seized by the city, and the Board of Control ordered on Thursday that not a single can must be sold in the city. The owners were afterwards given permission to remove the eggs from the cold-storage warehouse, but if there is any delay in removal every can will be destroyed. From the information given to the board it was shown that the eggs were dangerous to public health. In the analysis, which was made by experts, some surprising facts were brought out. The experts in their report say: "The eggs in the cans were found to be frozen, and are said to have come from China. The eggs, while in the frozen condition, had hardly any noticeable odor, as would have been expected. A small part of the eggs from samples were taken and placed in a warm temperature. Putrefaction of a violent nature resulted in about 24 hours, showing the presence of large numbers of bacteria. Such bacteria were probably introduced at the time of packing, the subsequent freezing checking their action."

An experiment was conducted to determine the effects of a small portion of the eggs, when inoculated into a guinea pig. On December 21, a sample of the mixture with sterilized water was injected subcutaneously into a guinea pig. The pig died in less than two days. The consignees were ordered to remove the stuff from the city, and some curiosity is exhibited as to who will finally get them.

TWO KILLED IN TRAIN WRECK Freight Trains Crash Together Near Collin's Bay.

A despatch from Kingston says: Two men were killed and another seriously injured in a wreck which cause of a fire in the building, which it was feared would totally destroy the place. The work of volunteer firemen and subsequently the town brigade prevented this and confined the flames to the roof, though at the cost of completely ing during the trial of rioters for their high-handed methods.

An accident to the conning-tower of a German submarine, as it was successfully raised to the surface, led to the suffocation of three men.

MYSTERIOUS MURDER.

Man Found Strangled in Winnipeg-Soo Train.

A despatch from Thief River Falls, Minn., says: Soon after the north-bound Winnipeg Soo Line flyer left Erskine on Sunday, the conductor found a man dying in one of the coaches. Doctors were called at Thief River Falls, who pronounced the man dead as a result of strangulation, although no marks of violence were visible on the body. A quantity of whiskey and several empty flasks found show that he used a considerable quantity of whiskey on the trip. The man was travelling on a ticket made in favor of L. R. Lowes, Cannington, Ont. Relatives were communicated with, and in the meantime the local lodge of Oddfellows took charge of the body, the dead man having been a member of that organization. Upon the arrival of Glen Lowes of Morris, Sask., brother of L. R. Lowes, he declared the body not that of his brother, and wholly unknown to him.

PLAGUE IN PEKIN.

Has at Last Entered the City and Claimed First Victim.

A despatch from Peking says: The first death in Peking since the outbreaks of the present epidemic of bubonic plague occurred in a missionary hospital on Friday. There had been earlier reports that the disease had entered the capital, but not until Friday had a fatality been traceable to the plague. In Manchuria and northern China the plague is slowly extending. A number of foreigners, most of them women and children, are leaving the country. The Chinese officials have, to a large extent, surrendered command of the fight to the missionary physicians.

ABANDON FISHERY.

Gloucester Herring Fleet Driven Away by Bergs.

A despatch from Bay of Islands, Nfld., says: Retreating before the southward movement of icebergs along the Newfoundland coast, the Gloucester fishing fleet has abandoned the season's herring fishery. Three of the vessels have failed to secure any fish, and eleven schooners carried only partial fares. Only five of the vessels have secured approximately full cargoes.

BRITISH ATTACK ON DUBUYA.

Collision Between British and Turks in Indian Ocean.

A despatch from Frankfort, Germany, says: The Zeitung's Constantinople correspondent reports a serious collision between British sailors and Turks at Dubuya in the Indian Ocean. Several blue jackets were killed. The British, according to the despatch, afterwards bombarded Dubuya.

pes, or eczema. Many people who are of the gouty or arthritic type will suffer from repeated attacks of tonsillitis, or herpes, or hay-fever while young, and become the victims of genuine gout in middle life.

Another constitutional predisposition is the neurotic or nervous type, in which, as its name implies, the nervous system is at fault, and will be selected as the point of attack. These are, in fact, the three great types into which all imperfect physical material may be divided—the strumous, the arthritic and the neurotic. In many persons two different types may be found blended and exercising a modifying influence upon each other—an influence which may be either favorable or unfavorable. Youth's Companion.

EXERCISE IN OLD AGE.

Exercise is an important part of the conduct of life in old age; but discretion is absolutely necessary. Men in years, advises the "Family Doctor," should discover by experience how much exercise they can take without exhausting their powers, and should be careful never to exceed the limit. Aged people are apt to forget that their staying powers are much less than they once were, and that while a walk of two or three miles may prove easy and pleasurable, the addition of a return journey of a similar length will seriously overtax the strength. Above all things, sudden and rapid exertion should be scrupulously avoided.

WILL RELIEVE PNEUMONIA.

Mix two tablespoons of flour and a heaping teaspoonful of cayenne pepper to a smooth paste, with hot vinegar. Spread on a cloth, cover with a piece of cheese cloth or muslin and apply to the chest. Speedy relief will follow and it will not blister the most sensitive skin.

MINERS LOSE SAVINGS.

Many at Keeley Mine Had Money in Farmers Bank.

A despatch from Cobalt says: The Keeley Mine is closed up as all the employees excepting two engineers and the cook refuse to return to work. Wages were cut 25 cents a day all round. Many of the miners had their savings in the branch of the Farmers Bank situated at the mine.

A CORONATION CORPS.

Colonel of Winnipeg Highlanders to Pay Expenses of Fifty.

A despatch from Winnipeg says: Fifty officers and men of the 79th Cameron Highlanders, Winnipeg, are to be sent to the Coronation celebration in London. Their expenses will be defrayed by R. M. Thompson, Lt.-Col. of the regiment.

Mose Johnson—Say, Pete, s'pose we gets ketchered fer stealin' dese heah turkeys—does we get jailed? Pete Persimmons—Suttinly not; turkeys am so high now—a-days dat stealin' a turkey's des like stealin' a railroad!

"John, don't you think I have worn this pair of shoes long enough?" "No, dear. If they were long enough you wouldn't have had those corns."

TWO KILLED IN TRAIN WRECK

Freight Trains Crash Together Near Collin's Bay.

A despatch from Kingston says: Two men were killed and another seriously injured in a wreck which occurred on the Grand Trunk, near Collin's Bay, at 1.30 o'clock on Monday morning. Two engines and six cars were wrecked and all trains on the main lines were blocked until 7 o'clock Monday morning. Two freight trains figured in the smash. One was going east and was stalled at a cut near Collin's Bay. Three engines were on the job trying to get her out. The conductor went to flag another freight coming, but before he could give the engineer of the other train sufficient warning it crashed into the rear of the stalled train. Wm. Cunningham, the brakeman, was on the engine which crashed into the other, and jumped. He escaped with the loss of an arm. Engineer Dennis and Fireman McDermott, of Belleville, did not get a chance to jump and were caught in the wreckage. Death was instantaneous.

ELEVEN KILLED.

Passenger Train on Welsh Line Dashed Into Coal Cars.

A despatch from Swansea, Wales, says: Eleven persons were killed in a railroad accident near Pont-y-Pridd on Monday morning. A train, which left here at 9.45, dashed into a coal train a half-mile from Pont-y-Pridd. The eleven killed included three local lawyers, three children and the engineer of the passenger train. Special police and troops who have been stationed in South Wales in connection with the coal strikes extricated the passengers who were penned under the wreckage and removed the bodies of the dead.

FIRE IN INSANE ASYLUM.

The New Glasgow Institution Has Narrow Escape.

A despatch from Halifax, N. S., says: Fifteen patients in the Aberdeen Hospital at New Glasgow were hurriedly removed on Monday because of a fire in the building, which it was feared would totally destroy the place. The work of volunteer firemen and subsequently the town brigade prevented this and confined the flames to the roof, though at the cost of completely flooding the structure. Flames breaking from the roof were seen by the passengers on a tram car. They got to work and were the means of saving the building. The fire was caused by sparks falling from the chimney. Every minister and doctor was on the scene ready to help the sick people.

WATER FAMINE AT OTTAWA.

The Tributaries of the River are Frozen Up.

A despatch from Ottawa says: The capital is facing a very serious situation in regard to its water and hydraulic power supply, owing to the exceptionally low water in the Ottawa River. Several big industries at the Chaudiere are either tied up altogether or running under difficulties, and many men are out of work as a result. Difficulty is also being experienced in maintaining water pressure at the civic pump house, and the situation might be serious in case of a big fire.

GEORGIAN BAY CANAL.

Appropriation of $3,000,000 to be Submitted.

A despatch from Ottawa says: It is now regarded as a settled fact that this year will see a start on the Georgian Bay Canal. A special estimate of three million dollars allowing for a beginning, has been prepared, and it is expected that it will shortly be brought down. Confirmation of the report is indicated in the remarks of Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux at Montreal, and also in statements that have been made by some of the Ministers to members for constituencies particularly interested in the work.

NEXT GOVERNOR - GENERAL

Duke of Teck Suggested in Case Duke of Connaught Cannot Come.

A despatch from Ottawa says: It is learned from high authority that his Serene Highness the Duke of Teck, eldest brother of Queen Mary, may be the next Governor-General of Canada. Although no official advices have been received here by the Government yet that the Duke of Connaught will be unable to come to Canada this year as representative of the King, owing to the need of his presence in England until the Prince of Wales is old enough to assume the duties of his position, present indications are that his Royal Highness will be prevented from coming for that reason. It is understood that the Imperial Government is now suggesting in an informal way that the Duke of Teck would be a suitable choice as successor to Lord Grey, in case it is found that the Duke of Connaught cannot be spared. The matter has as yet not got beyond the stage of tentative suggestion, but it is known that it is under consideration. His Serene Highness is a grandson of the first Duke of Cambridge, and the eldest son of the late Duke of Teck and of H.R.H. Princess Mary Adelaide. He was born at Kensington Palace on August 12, 1863, and saw service in South Africa as transport officer of a composite cavalry regiment. He was temporary military attaché at Vienna in 1901.

Died at Fort William.

Died, at the home of her son-in-law in Fort William, on January 15th,
Margaret, wife of the late Samuel Jaynes. She leaves to mourn the loss of a loving mother, two daughters and one son, Mrs. Jas. Shorey, of Winnipeg; Mrs. Chas. Goodsell, of Fort
William, and George, of Watertown.

Till he come, oh let the words
Linger on the trembling chords,
Let the little while between
In their golden light be seen ;
Let us think how Heaven and Home
Lie beyond that till he come.

When the weary ones we love
Enter on their rest above,
When their words of love and cheer
Fall no longer on our ear,
Hush be every murmur dumb,
It is only till He come.

Historical Meeting.

Prof. O. D. Skelton, who is to lecture at the meeting of the Historical Society to-night, was elected President of the Kingston Canadian Club on Wednesday. His subject here will be
"The Referendum." When Prof.
Adam Shortt left Queen's, his chair, as professor of Political Science, was taken by Prof. Skelton, who is reported as one of the best of the young men of Canada at the present time.
The Referendum is a subject about which very little is at present known.
What has been written about it in the daily papers is usually colored by the influence of party. Prof. Skelton has a keen interest in history and his lecture to-night will, without doubt, be one of the most interesting of the series. The admission is free and everybody will be welcomed. Historical Hall, Library building, 8 p. m.,

N. C. I. News.

On Thursday of last week, a meeting of the N. C. I. Literary Society was held in the Assembly Hall. Owing to Mr. Collins' departure we were left without a critic and Miss Grange was unanimously chosen to occupy this position. After this business was settled the President, Mr. Linbert
Graham, called on Miss Edith Edwards and Miss Florence Walker for an instrumental duet, which was well rendered. Miss May Dunwoody then gave a recitation which was much appreciated. Following this was a fine vocal solo by Percy Nesbit. We are glad to welcome Percy and Miss Nesbit to our Literary Society and hope that they will soon feel at home.
After this selection Miss Grace Ward gave a mandolin solo and this was followed by a debate. The subject

Besides his aged widow six children are left to mourn the loss of a kind Father and a loving husband. His end was peace.

Fire Alarm Addition.

Wednesday a new fire alarm box, in connection with the present system, was installed in the central office of the Bell Telephone Co. This should undoubtedly prove decidedly advantageous, as fire alarms may now be sent in by telephone and a general alarm rung from that office. This new alarm should be easily distinguishable from a box number alarm, or a general alarm sounded from the fire hall, as the thirty-five strokes will be of a somewhat slower nature, and the public will also do well to bear in mind that a box number should not be rung in while this general alarm is being sounded. The Bell Telephone Company have kindly consented to allow this alarm to be installed in their office free of charge, and to be operated in case of alarms by their operators.

A Pleasant Event.
A most enjoyable meeting of the United Empire Chapter of the Imperial Order of the Empire was held at the residence of the Regent, Mrs. Harshaw, on Tuesday afternoon, January 24th, all of the members wore violets to commemorate Violets Day, a special occasion observed widely by the Chapters of the Order to commemorate the demise of Queen Victoria, and to keep green in the hearts of all loyal Daughters of the Empire the memory of her beautiful life as woman and queen. Miss Lineau read a most interesting paper, written by a member of the Governor Simcoe Chapter, on "The Beginning of the Empire." A most agreeable feature of the afternoon was the presentation of a very handsome silk flag, kindly donated to the Chapter, by the First Vice Regent, Mrs. J. H. Madden.

Brisco Opera House, Feb. 9th.
When the curtain rises on the first act of "The Old Homestead" there comes wafting over the footlights the sweet and wholesome fragrance of a pure New England home, the sunlight of an honest, upright character, reflected in the dear old Yankee farmer. And mingled with this delightful and inspiring atmosphere of country life is a genuine strain of American humor, as racy of the soil as are the characters themselves in "The Old Homestead." What need is there to say more in connection with the forthcoming engagement of this perennial favorite? This is its twenty-fifth season, and it is as pleasant to-day as ever. There are Cy Prime, "nigh onto eighty," and Seth Perkins, the two "boys" who frolic like kittens and never grow old, Aunt Matilda, Ricketty Ann, the Ganzy boy, the "gentleman" tramp and the rest. How well they harmonize in the family, as after the pathetic search of Uncle Josh for his wayward son amid the enticing fascinations of the metropolis, they all gather around the fire-side. It is gratifying to know that Mr. Thompson will bring a complete production and an excellent company. All the familiar scenes that have made the performance so attractive in the past will be seen in their characteristic picturesqueness and will include the "Old Homestead" farm in its summer garb, the striking reproduction of Grace Church, New York, by moonlight, and the typical farmhouse kitchen, where Reuben's friends are gathered to meet him on his return. This fine old play was first booked for Napanee for February 13th, but on account of the Ladies Musical Club wanting that date for their concert, Mr. I. H. Brisco, through the courtesy of A. J. Small, who has the booking of this play, succeeded in having the date changed to February 9th. This means that "The Old Homestead" Company has to do a tremendous amount of extra railroading to fill this date, and the play is well worth the patronage of the public, it is hoped they will be greeted with a bumper house.
